The Story of Santa

By MAC McDONALD

QUICK, WHAT'S a holiday party, without Santa? Easy: a revel without a Claus.

Okay, quit your moaning, because you may be surprised to learn that Christmas used to be celebrated without a Santa Claus less than 200 years ago in America.

So in view of the long-held religious nature of Christmas as it relates to the birth of the Christ child, the figure of roly-poly Santa is relatively new, and as it turns out, as American as apple pie, or Rambo for that matter.

Santa Claus, as you may have found it hard to avoid, is the most visible symbol of Christmas and the genneral merrymaking and spirit of giftgiving that prevails during the month of December. Who can resist smiling when confronted with the familiar figure of the jolly old fat man with the ruddy cheeks, clouds of white whiskers, bright red suit and a hearty ho-ho-ho that's as recognizable as the Jolly Green Giant's, if a trifle less loud.

Much like America itself, Santa and Christmas are results of a hodgepodge of Eastern European culture, old wives' tales, ancient traditions, fairy tales, religious customs and mythic legends.

Author John Ciardi once called Christmas as we know it now as "what happened when the Christian Feast of the Nativity collided with the ancient Teutonic Yule." And laser-blasted by transformer robots or trampled by Cabbage Patch Dolls these days, no doubt.

Christmas, in the traditional sense, of course, is the celebration of the birth of Christ. But Santa Claus? Who can really tell? What the heck is a Santa Claus anyway, and where did he come from? If you said the North Pole I have some nice tundra to sell you.

•

THERE ACTUALLY was a St. Nicholas, by the way. He was one of the major saints of Roman Catholicism, a fourth century bishop of Myra in Asia Minor. He was the patron saint of gift-giving, among other things, and wasa thought to be the

A new initiative

Dear Editor:

I am writing to respond to the CBA Comments column in the most recent issue and to suggest that perhaps there is a larger role that the Pine Cone could play to help reduce the simmering animosity of the city council by the business community.

First, I am disappointed that the CBA Comments article is unsigned, as I'm sure that there are many business people who would disagree with some of the comments. (The columns by the council members are signed.)

Second, I am bothered by the lack of any specific complaints. I have heard these same generalities quite often in the year-plus that I have lived here, but I never see anything specific.

Third, the column is in error about Carmel paying $750,000 for the addition to the library; the money for the addition is coming from a donated trust fund. Further, the money the city is spending in connection with the library annex is for parking and restrooms which benefit businesses. In fairness, it should also be pointed out that a good part of the $6 million Carmel budget is spent on services occasioned, in good part, by the million-plus people who visit the businesses of Carmel.

The writer of the CBA column complains about the difficulty of making a living in a small business in Carmel. That is not a unique characteristic of Carmel as small businesses in large and small cities are rarely opportunities to make a lot of money. It is unclear how the council can be blamed for the fact that certain stores do only a "mediocre volume of sales." In fact, the council probably is far down the list of probable causes of limited sales.

The large rents and big increases are a threat to small businesses. The only way to moderate rent increases is to have a large supply of retail space which would probably reduce the sales of all businesses and ruin the ambiance of Carmel. So, the rent increases can't be blamed on the council; they are carrying out the wishes of the residents. Perhaps the greed on the part of some landlords (businessmen?) should be the focus, but not the council.

In the time that I have been living in Carmel I have attended most of the city council meetings and have found the council members to be dedicated to doing what is best for Carmel, not just the residents. At the same time, I have heard some of the business people speak before the council and say some incredibly silly things. The council is not perfect, but it is sensitive and interested in constructive approaches.

I think there is a larger role that the Pine Cone could play in resolving some of the lingering issues between business and the city. Effective use of editorials and continuing to offer space for columns about specific issues can help bridge some of the gap that now exists.

First, I think the CBA should be encouraged to establish some priorities as to what would enhance the business climate in Carmel. No generalities; it has to be specific. The council can't respond to generalities. Next, I think the CBA should consider what contributions it could make to enhance the situation (it should be a mutual responsibility to improve conditions). I can think of a number of issues that should be addressed:

- What is business going to do about continuing to wash down sidewalks, driveways, etc. while there is serious concern over water usage.
- What is business going to do about leaving garbage cans out overnight on the sidewalk to leak or be tipped over by dogs, raccoons or an errant drunk; it isn't just ice cream cones that mess up the sidewalks.
- What is business going to do to reduce the truck deliveries, particularly during the busiest part of the day; the double-parked trucks create part of the problem of keeping potential customers away.
- What is business going to do about having the employees use many of the very limited parking spaces that could be used to a greater benefit by potential customers.
- Is business going to support the police in the enforcement of the 20-minute zone parking; one to three hours is frequently allowed, reducing turnover and limiting access by those with business to transact.

I believe the council would welcome some initiative on the part of the CBA about their specific priorities and on the above points. It is not inconceivable that a diplomatic, thoughtfully crafted approach would result in the approval of an ice cream parlor by the council. The long-term viability of the business community is clearly of interest to the council. And the increasing incidence of "for lease" signs in the shop windows does make an impression.

Please accept my apology for the length of my response, but I felt a new initiative on this important matter might be merited.

Sensible proposal

Dear Editor:

I would like to express my support for the comments of Councilman Robert Stephenson in the Dec. 5 issue of the Pine Cone, regarding the space problems at Harrison Memorial Library. I feel that his solution to the continuing controversy about the library building is eminently sensible. The proposal for a "Carmel Museum" in the original building on Ocean Avenue would satisfy the many residents who wish to keep their "living room" in its present location; and would remove objections to alterations in the building or an extension or annex across the street.

Mayor Townsend has frequently mentioned the need for display space for the many artworks belonging to the library. There must also be a significant collection of local history materials which could be housed in a museum building.

Such a decision would then make possible the construction of an adequate new library in another location; I would hope at Sunset Center where vacant space already exists. This location would be convenient to residents, easily accessible to downtown, and could incorporate parking facilities.

Harrison Memorial Library is extraordinarily fortunate to have an adequate endowment which would go a long way toward meeting the costs of a new building. And this would make possible (in Mr. Stephenson's words) "a library worthy of the aspirations and quality of Carmel."

I hope this proposal will receive serious consideration. Why settle for an already inadequate annex as a temporary solution?

An evil legacy

Dear Editor:

"The evil men do lives after them." Never has that been more true than in the case of our past county supervisors.

Not long ago, I received a call on a Sunday afternoon that my mother in Seaside had just suffered a massive coronary and was on her way to the Community Hospital. Five minutes later I was on my way from my home in Hitchcock Canyon. Fifty-five minutes later I was at the hospital. Once and sometimes twice daily for the following week I made that same trip and each and every time I cursed the stupidity, mindless greed and political corruption that has allowed the Valley to become what it is.

Death concluded my problem but not my disgust.

Helen Arnold honored in Piccadilly

Grants sought

City officially pursues Mission Ranch buy

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CARMEL City Council Tuesday night continued its pursuit to acquire Mission Ranch Resort by hiring a consultant and officially filing an application for a state grant to help buy the property.

The council, on a unanimous vote and with no discussion, approved the hiring of William Yeates of Pacific Grove to assist in grant applications and to lobby lawmakers for state funds.

An attorney, Yeates also is the Sacramento representative on the League for Coastal Protection.

The city will pay Yeates a maximum of $1,000 per month for his services.

In a related matter, the council unanimously authorized staff to apply for a grant from the Coastal Conservancy, a state agency dedicated to helping buy coastal lands for permanent open space.

The council would like the Coastal Conservancy to grant the funds to at least buy the approximately 10-acre wetlands area of Mission Ranch. The city in preliminary talks with the Coastal Conservancy was told that there may be as much as $550,000 available.

The city has been concerned about potential development of Mission Ranch Resort since the owners announced plans to build about 60 residences on 8.25 acres. The resort is just outside the city limits southwest of Carmel Mission.

The city and Mission Ranch Corp. are embroiled in a lawsuit over the development proposal. The council sees a purchase as a way to preserve the site, which includes a motel, restaurant, tennis courts and other buildings.

The city has offered Mission Ranch Corp. $3.75 million, but that proposal was rejected.

The ultimate goal of the council is to work with the state, the Frohman Academy and the Carmel Heritage Society for joint purchase and ownership of Mission Ranch. The area would be annexed to the city.

The city would like to see the wetlands remain open space, lease out the restaurant and motel as a private concession, keep the tennis courts for public use, have the Frohman Academy use some buildings for its operations and allow the Heritage Society a site for a museum.

Mission Ranch Corp. spokesman Doug Tuck has continually said that he would prefer to build homes rather than sell the site.

•

IT WAS a busy day for the council, which met for more than fours in public session, added a couple of hours worth of closed-door talks on litigation, and also conducted a noon tour.

In action Tuesday, the council:

• Honored Councilwoman Helen Arnold with a plaque for her work in making Piccadilly Park possible. The award was a surprise as Mrs. Arnold thought the council was just touring the park on the west side of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh. The plaque is on a stone near the entrance to the park. (See photos, page 2.)

• Required Craig McFarland to prepare an environmental impact report for some work he plans near the seawall that protects his Pebble Beach home. The council action upheld the planning commission decision to require the EIR.

• Overturned the planning commission and reached a consensus that the Picnic Box in Redwood Court should be allowed some additional seating, including two outside tables. The council remanded the application to the commission for conditions to be attached to the use permit.

• Approved applying to the Department of Fish and Game for a $45,000 grant to help finance the costs of restrooms at Devendorf Park.

• Awarded a bid to Randazzo Enterprises for $5,675 to demolish the structures on five city owned lots on the west side of Dolores Street between Fifth and Fourth avenues. Construction will begin in early 1986 on a 15-unit complex for low-income senior citizens.

• Authorized the mayor to protest attempts by the cities of Gilroy and Morgan Hill to dump effluent in Monterey Bay.

• Accepted a report on the senior citizens taxi subsidy program. The city will restrict each senior to a $50 subsidy per month. City Administrative Services Director Greg D'Ambrosio said the $50 will provide adequate service for the seniors. Those in need of additional subsidies may appeal to the city and will be decided on a case-by-case basis.

• Authorized a resolution that seeks a Coastal Conservancy grant to offset the approximately $1 million cost of the Carmel Beach Rehabilitation Project.

• Received an overview of the new beach walkway and landscaping plan. The environmental impact report is out for public review until Jan. 31.

• Appointed Ken White to the planning commission, and Scott Hall and Roy Thomas to the forestry commission.

• Adopted on first reading an ordinance designed to restrict the location and number of news racks in the city. Second reading is scheduled for Jan. 14 and the ordinance would be effective 30 days later.

History of Mission Ranch recounted in DeVoe book

MARCIA DE Voe undertook a labor of love six years ago — to tell the community about a pair of pioneering families in a book that is entitled The Martins and the Hattons.

The small self-published paperback through its connecting of the two families reveals a brief history of the first settlers of Mission Ranch at the turn of the century.

And her subheading on the title page "A look into the past with a hope for the future" is appropriate today.

De Voe, a now-retired school teacher who taught at Sunset School and River School, is concerned from the historical sense that there are attempts to develop Mission Ranch Resort, an approximately 20-acre site just outside the city limits southwest of Carmel Mission.

"That old ranch house shouldn't be torn down," said De Voe, a life-long Monterey Peninsula resident who now makes her home in Carmel Woods.

"It certainly should be on the National Historic Trust list," she believes.

De Voe supports attempts by the city of Carmel to put together a group of interests to buy and preserve Mission Ranch. Mission Ranch Corp. has plans to demolish the buildings and build about 60 residences on 8.25 acres of the site. (See related story, this page.)

De Voe's book reveals that two families — the Hattons and Martins — farmed Mission Ranch and the area now known as the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center.

The first whites to farm Mission Ranch were John Martin and his new wife, the former Elizabeth Stewart, a widower from Canada.

The Martins built their home at Mission Ranch. The home eventually was raised and used as a second story and a new first floor was constructed.

The first crops farmed on Mission Ranch were potatos, pumpkins, wheat and grain. The family also raised dairy cows and sold milk and cheese to the old Del Monte Dairy.

Through the years the property was bought and sold. Today it is the site of a motel, tennis courts, restaurant, and cocktail lounge with its popular piano bar.

The individual motel units and the adjacent tennis courts were added years later.

The restaurant used to be a milk barn and the current barn was indeed an old hay barn. The Martin's original home is now a bed and breakfast inn.

Some cattle still graze on the property.

Police Chief McGilvray set for special training

IF THE pope, president or other visiting dignitary ever decide to visit Carmel-by-the-Sea they will be well-protected.

Carmel Police Chief Jack McGilvray has been selected to attend a special "dignitary protection seminar" put on by the Secret Service.

McGilvray, who was only one of four Californians selected (the other three are in San Francisco), will attend the seminar Feb. 5-14 in Washington, D.C.

McGilvray's selection could fuel speculation that Pope John Paul II will visit Carmel Mission next year if Father Junipero Serra is canonized.

But as far as McGilvray is concerned, a visit by the pope currently is just speculation.

"As far as the papal (visit) is concerned, that's all strictly rumor. We don't know," McGilvray said.

McGilvray said the training will be "invaluable" whether or not the pope visits Carmel.

The Secret Service brochure states that "each participant will be able to react to the different problems in the protection of local, national and international dignitaries," McGilvray said.

The program courses include assassination, advance planning, protective measures and legal aspects, he said.

The chief explained that he was in contact with a Secret Service agent in San Jose last year on another matter when the subject of attending the dignitary protection seminar was broached.

McGilvray expressed an interest and last week he was notified that he had been selected to attend.

McGilvray said oftentimes dignitaries are in Carmel, but the public just is not aware of their presence for security reasons.

In addition there are special events on the peninsula attended by dignitaries. One of the more frequent visitors here needing Secret Service protection is former President Gerald Ford, an avid golfer and frequent entrant in the former Bing Crosby National Pro-Am in Pebble Beach.

The Secret Service is in charge of protecting President Reagan and his family; former presidents and their families; and all visiting foreign dignitaries, McGilvray added.

savior of young maidens and students, which will be discussed in detail later.

St. Nicholas' legend somehow made its way up to the Netherlands, where he was called "Sint Nikolaas," which was later shortened to "Sinter Klaas" when Dutch immigrants settled in New Amsterdam, later to be shortend to New York. A good thing, too, "I Love New Amsterdam," and the "New Amsterdam Yankees" just don't have the same ring.

Are you stil with me? Good. It gets better. To see for yourself how St. Nicholas eventually became Santa Claus, try saying "Saint Nicholas" five times very fast and you'll get the picture.

"Big deal," you may say, "so there's a connection between St. Nick and Santa Claus, so where do the other Christmas traditions come from, a bunch of imaginative and overactive elves?"

Well, the Dutch celebrated the arrival of St. Nicholas on Dec. 6 by placing their wooden shoes by the fireplace and leaving hay for his horse. You see back in those days St. Nick was a bishop who rode a white horse and carried a purse of money in one hand for the good little children and a birch rod in the other for the naughty ones. Bad boys and girls didn't just get off with a few less stocking stuffers in those days.

Meanwhile, not to be left out of all the revelry, the Germans were celebrating their Yule (in Old Norse, "jul"), which was a two-week winter sun-worshippers festival following the winter solstice. The English, obviously enjoying the midday sun along with the mad dogs, took that festival and made it their 12 Days of Christmas.

Myth even has it that the Germans had their own version of Santa Claus, a jolly old boozer who danced from home to home in the dead of winter bumming food and drink wherever he could, surrounded by neighborhood urchins, who in turn bummed or snitched food and drink from the betsotted codger. No one said Santa and his elves had to be good little boys, too.

This "Old Man of the Woods" became known around the eighth century as Kriss Kringle, a derivation of the German word "Christkindl," or the Little Christ Child. This gives further impetus to Ciardi's "collision of cultures" description.

•

THE AMERICAN version of Santa Claus, however, even though a mixture of the aforementioned cultures, was crystallized in American consciousness by Clement Clark Moore's famous poem, A Visit from St. Nicholas, written in 1822. It's the one that begins, "'Twas the night before Christmas..."

Moore used the words "Santa Claus" and "St. Nicholas" interchangeably, even calling him, "St. Nick," who was a "right jolly old elf." Moore's Santa was small and elfish and wore furs. He rode in a small sleigh pulled by reindeer that magically flew through the dark, snowy skies.

Thomas Nast, the famous American illustrator and cartoonist, further solidified the image of Santa Claus with his drawings in the mid-1800s. Even though various images of Santa Claus appeared in Moore's poems and Nast's drawings, it was the combination of the two that popularized the figure of Santa Claus as we know him today.

Santa has evolved very little since the mid-1800s, perhaps getting a little more rotund and jollier with age. Some of the customs surrounding his arrival every year can also be traced to one of his antecedents, the real St. Nicholas, the one on the white horse.

The leaving of a plate of cookies, cakes and beverage can be traced to the ancient custom of leaving hay for St. Nicholas' horse. The custom may also have its roots in the ritual begging of the Old Man of the Woods, although it's doubtful the old sot would've gone for milk and cookies. Lowenbrau and beer nuts, maybe.

The hanging of stockings above the fireplace can also be traced back to Bishop Nicholas.

As the legend goes, there was a poor man with three marriageable daughters, but no money for their dowries. St. Nick, upon hearing of the old man's plight, on successive nights stealthily threw into the house a gold bag for each sister. Thus each daughter was able to wed.

"Aha," you ask, alert as ever. "How did he throw the bags of gold into the house in the dead of winter?" In those days houses did not have chimneys or fireplaces, but fire pits, with a railing around the pit and hole in the roof to let out smoke.

This, of course, eventually led to the story of Santa coming down the chimney to deliver gifts, but it also established the tradition of hanging Christmas stockings. You see, the three daughters would wash their stockings at night and set them on the rail to dry overnight. St. Nick, knowing this, stood outside the house and lobbed the gold bags into each sister's stocking. This, of course, calls for some pretty nifty Larry Bird-like lobbing, but why be a saint if you can't make the tough shots?

SALVATORE V BALESTERI
PRESIDENT

TO OUR CARMEL SUBSCRIBERS:

In 1985, the City of Carmel conducted one of its periodic surveys to solicit the opinions of the citizens of Carmel on a variety of subjects. One of those subjects was the Cable Television service you receive from MPTV (some of you have been our loyal subscribers for more than 30 years).

Each of you was invited to identify specific problems you might be having, and we're delighted to be able to inform you that the great majority of you had no problems to report. This is a record of satisfaction that would make any service industry justly proud - and we are proud of this record.

However, we know we are not perfect, and we truly want to continually improve our service. Therefore, and with an assist from the City of Carmel, we analyzed and cataloged each and every comment you gave to the City, so we would have our own service improvement "blueprint" for the coming year. We want to share that analysis with you.

Printed next to this letter is that analysis. As you can see, in each and every category, we are dealing with extremely high levels of satisfaction.

Are we proud of this record? - you bet! Are we cocky about this record? - no way! Until we reach that maybe unattainable 100% satisfaction level, we'll never stop trying to improve our service to you, our valued subscribers.

So, as we approach the end of 1985, please accept the profound thanks of the entire staff of your MPTV for making 1985 such a wonderful year for all of us.

From all of us to all of you, we wish you the very happiest of Holiday Seasons.

Most cordially,

Salvatore V. Balesteri

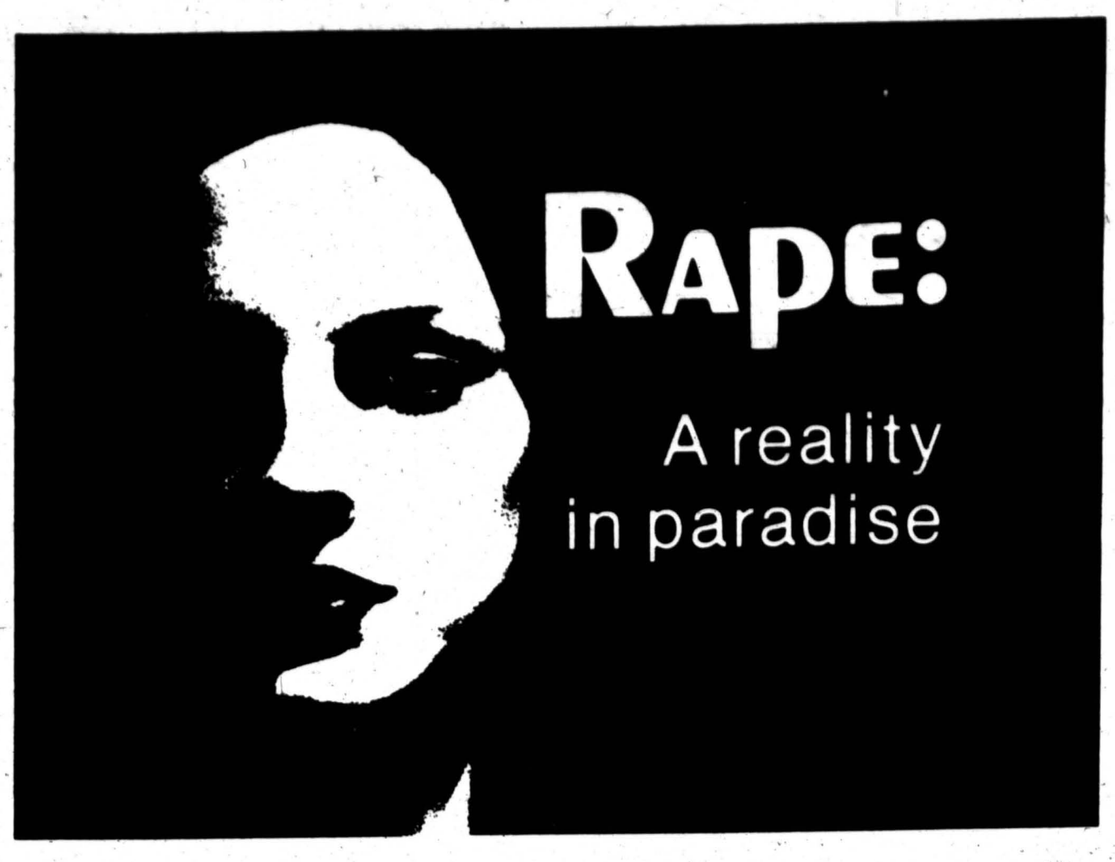
Rape: It can and will happen in Carmel

Monterey Peninsula reports twice the national average

By MICHAEL GARDNER
(First in a series)



WE SOMETIMES tend to get enveloped in a womb of self-perceived safety on the Monterey Peninsula as our common-sense safeguards are dropped in the shadows of colorful boats docked in the marina, long sandy-white beaches, quaint shops and rolling green hills.

There is a perception perpetuated by the beauty, the serenity and the small-town atmosphere here that big city violent crime is reserved for Central Park in New York City or the Tenderloin in San Francisco.

That perception simply is not true.

Sarah, an 80-year-old spinster, is sound asleep at 5 a.m. when an unidentified man surprises her in bed, brutally rapes her and then flees with $16 in cash after cutting her telephone wires. He was never apprehended.

Perhaps the most troubling violent crime on the Monterey Peninsula is rape — this area has twice the national average of reported rapes on a per capita basis.

During the first 11 months of 1985 there were 219 sexual assaults personally-reported to the Monterey Rape Crisis Center. In 1984, there were 143 reports to the center.

The 24-hour Monterey Rape Crisis Center crisis line received 602 calls related to sexual assault through Nov. 30 of this year compared to 467 calls in all of 1984.

In the first 11 months of 1985 there were 21 reports of male rape — four times the number reported for all of 1984.

And rape is not just a crime to occur on the other side of the hill — there were six reported rapes in Carmel in 1984. Fortunately, the number of reported sexual assaults in Carmel decreased to two for the first 11 months of 1985. Another young teenager was raped near the middle school in Carmel Valley.

Kay is separated from her husband and decides to have dinner with some friends at The Lodge in Pebble Beach. On her way home to Carmel she stops at a stop sign and a man jumps in the unlocked passenger side door. He forces her to drive to a secluded area and rapes her. She later tells police that "I would have locked my car but this was Pebble Beach, not Watts." He is not apprehended.

Carmel Police Lt. Don Fuselier is not just talking about police reports when he discusses the sexual assault problems here. Fuselier's ex-wife, now his "best friend," was raped in 1983.

"There are a lot of myths about rape and a lot of misconceptions," explained Fuselier, who also is a volunteer with the Monterey Rape Crisis Center.

"The greatest and most dangerous myth of all is that it won't happen to me. That it can't happen to me. With this attitude they don't follow good safety precautions," Fuselier said.

"It can happen right here and it does. It isn't just the cute little gal hitchhiking," he continued.

"We become complacent here. I wish it were true that we live in an area that is crime-free. We don't," he said.

•

FUSELIER SAID another myth about rape is that women entice men by hitchhiking, wearing sexy clothes or picking up strangers in bars.

He recalled the rape of an 80-year-old Carmel woman asleep in her bed. The suspect, who was never apprehended, also robbed her of $16.

"This 80-year-old woman was hardly out looking for it," he said. "We're not talking about Watts. We're talking about Carmel-by-the-Sea."

The public's usual perception of a rapist is a degenerate out for quick sexual gratification who hates his mother. This stereotype is a fallacy, Fuselier said.

"It cannot be stressed more that rape is not a crime of passion. It is a crime of degradation, humiliation, dominance and violence," he said.

"Sex is not what the rapist is looking for. A vast majority of them have willing sex partners," Fuselier said.

"Years ago they thought they were all guys who hated their mothers. We don't know now. They come from all ethnic, social and economic backgrounds. I wish we had a prototype. We don't," Fuselier said.

Melanie, a 26-year-old maid for a big hotel in Carmel, is waiting at the bus stop when she sees a casual acquaintance. He offers her a lift and they wind up back at his place in Monterey where he repeatedly rapes her. The traumatized Melanie chooses not to file charges.

"Date rape" — also called "acquaintance rape" — is another type of sexual assault that is beginning to be more frequently reported, Fuselier said.

"We don't know how many there are because they're not commonly reported. The victims feel guilt and are reluctant to report them," he explained. "I don't care if the woman invited the man up to her apartment. I don't care if she's had sex with him before. Sex without her consent is rape. A prostitute can be raped."

For centuries rape has been a taboo in society. Women were portrayed as "inviting" or "wanting" to be raped. It was something never to be talked about, but rather hushed up and put in the closet with no thoughts to the trauma experienced by the victim.

But with the rise of the women's movement, rape has begun to be destigmatized. Crisis centers help the women through the ordeal of filing a police report and testifying in court.

The police and judicial system have become more aware. It has been shifted from the status of a sex crime to that of a violent crime.

Fuselier candidly admits that police and court attitudes in the past "absolutely" caused many women to live with their fear and trauma rather than confront the rapist in public.

Courts, police system are more sensitive to rape victims' trauma

about "wanting it" or suggesting that she "lured" the man to her apartment is an attitude of the past, Fuselier said.

Today, Fuselier works with the Department of Justice in training veteran officers in the special skills necessary when interviewing a rape victim.

Interview techniques especially are important to "establish a bond, a trust so the victim feels freer to share the evidence and nature of the crime," he said.

Carrie is a 16-year-old runaway who is looking for her companion when a man says her friend has been injured and is at his Pebble Beach home. Carrie follows him through the dunes by the world-famous golf course where she is suddenly thrown to the ground and raped. It is a rare case because the man is apprehended and convicted of two rape charges.

In addition, police academies that train new recruits have expanded their programs related to crimes such as rape, child molestation and domestic violence.

Another fear women have in reporting crimes is the judicial system. Brow beating of the victim is a common horror story and has been perpetuated in the media, Fuselier admits.

But the courts have begun to better protect the victim, Fuselier said.

"Years ago a rape victim could be forced to undergo psychiatric tests. That was outrageous," Fuselier said.

And up until recently, defense attorneys could drag up the victim's past and force her to recall former sexual activities in efforts to discredit her testimony, he pointed out.

That too, has been abolished, although there are times when a defense attorney tries to force such testimony, Fuselier said.

If there is a stigma still attached to sexual assault, you can multiply the guilt and shame a hundred-fold for male rape victims. And if there are unfair sterotypes for the kind of women who are assaulted, then too there are unjust labels attached to male victims.

"We're not just talking about homosexuals. We're talking about guys who just happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time," Fuselier said.

Although no male rape cases have been reported in Carmel, there have been 21 cases handled by the Monterey Rape Crisis Center so far in 1985.

Fuselier is convinced that there are many more incidents than reported, but that the male victims are so "incredibly traumatized," that they — like their female counterparts of two decades ago — try to forget rather than go through the emotional upheaval and publicity of police reports and courtrooms.

"This is a small town," is how Fuselier explains the reluctance to report male rape.

•

FUSELIER DOES know that some male rape cases are perpetuated by former convicts.

"That type of crime is real common in the prison system and it carries over to civilian life," he said.

However, the problem has begun to be publicized and thus, destigmatized. A major breakthrough came in the showing of the television film The Rape of Richard Beck, which did for male rape that such movies as The Burning Bed (domestic violence) and That Certain Summer (homosexuality) did to publicize their respective social concerns.

Only one out of 10 sexual assaults are ever reported to police and out of that, maybe one is prosecuted as a rape. Others are dismissed for lack of evidence or the charges are reduced to simple assault through plea bargaining.

But despite the dismal figures, police and social service agencies say the only way to protect women is for other women to brave the system and report attacks.

The average rapist has sexually assaulted 17 women before he is apprehended, according to police statistics.

Carmel residents especially are vulnerable to attack because the neighborhoods do not have street lights, giving the criminals a convenient cloak of darkness, Fuselier said.

Kathy is spending her Saturday off from school at the beach where she is approached by two men who offer the teenager wine. Soon she is tipsy and the men drag her into the bluffs and take turns raping her. The men are never apprehended.

Some tips Fuselier offers include:

- Keep outdoor floodlights on throughout the night hours. "Burglars, prowlers, peeping toms and rapists all avoid light."
- Keep car locked at all times, even when just parked for a couple of minutes. Always check the car for intruders before entering. Lock the car while driving.
- Use good safety at home. Keep doors and windows locked, even in the daytime. "The largest percentage of our residential burglaries occur during the day."
- Don't let strangers in to use the telephone. You make the call or tell him the location of the nearest pay booth.
- Start a Neighborhood Watch program.
- Walk with someone at all times. Walk confidently and do not loiter. Walk in well-lighted areas and stay away from shrubbery that could conceal an attacker.

Fuselier said police will visit a home for safety checks and also meet with neighborhoods about safety precautions.

Anne, a 30-year-old divorcee with two children, decides to take the garbage out just before the 11 o'clock news. She sees a shadow, but by then it's too late as a man grabs a fork from the barbecue, forces her back into the house and rapes her while the kids sleep in the adjacent room. He was never apprehended.

One of the most perplexing problems for a woman if she is attacked is whether to fight back.

•

FUSELIER SAYS there is no "black and white answer" to that question.

Kindergarten — a special world

By ROSEMARY MONTGOMERY
River School Principal

If you have never visited a kindergarten classroom, you have missed a special world. Kindergarten children are eager for every new experience and seem to have insatiable appetites for learning and trying new things. They acquire skills at an amazing rate and their minds know no limits.

Kindergarten children don't think like adults do. They have a special perception of the world. In their minds, Mother Nature considers them before She makes a decision. The sun shines so 5-year-olds can play outside. The rain falls so they can splash in the puddles. The wind blows so they can fly kites.

Kindergarten teachers are perceived in a special way, too. To a young child, a teacher has no life outside of school. A few years ago, one of my kindergarten students looked around the room and asked, "Where is your bed?" There was no doubt in his mind that I lived in the classroom and would be very lonely during summer vacation.

Teaching a group of kindergarten students takes a great deal of planning and lots of energy and enthusiasm. River School is fortunate to have three excellent kindergarten teachers who provide the kind of program which meets the needs of young children. Holly Decker, Julie Foudy and Joe Lowe bring their own unique talents to their students. Each offers a basic curriculum enhanced by their individual personalities and interests.

Holly Decker is new to our kindergarten program this year, but she is not new to River School. Last year, Holly taught third grade. Her background also includes work with younger children, so she's very much at home in a kindergarten classroom.

Holly enjoys grouping children for activities and providing ways for children to learn through the use of manipulatives. She believes that children learn by experiencing new concepts on a concrete level. She also feels that children benefit by working together, developing important social and academic skills. Pass by Holly's classroom on any given day and you will observe a wonderland of activity. She is able to work magic!

Julie Foudy has many years of experience in kindergarten in River School. She has earned a fine reputation as a teacher who provides a rich and caring environment for her students. She has a gift for involving parents in the kindergarten experience.

Julie looks for new and better materials to enhance her programs. This year she is using an interesting curriculum, Project AIMS, developed by the Fresno Pacific Math-Science Project. The program stresses thinking skills. It offers a variety of math-science activities which require such skills as predicting, observing, interpreting data and generalizing. With Julie's special touch, this is an exceptional kindergarten program.

Joe Lowe has been sharing his talents with children for more than 30 years. He taught at Woods School before joining the River School faculty. Joe nurtures his students as he does his rose garden, with sensitivity and care.

Mr. Lowe, as the children call him, uses the arts to teach a variety of skills and concepts. Art helps children develop small muscle coordination as well as an appreciation for beauty and a way to express creativity. Music develops listening skills as well as the opportunity to experience rhythm and singing. Poetry develops memory skills as well as an appreciation for our language. The arts develop both thinking skills and feeling skills. Joe Lowe creates the environment for all of this to take place.

Each of our teachers works hard to make this important first year meaningful and successful for every child. They make kindergarten a very special beginning. (Next time, we'll explore the wonderful world of first grade.)

Not in realty business, but city makes $125,000

THE CITY of Carmel, for an iginal $685,000 investment, not only luced the potential density of develop- nt on the Gamble estate but also ap- ars to have made a sizeable profit.

The last of the four city-owned Gamble s now is in escrow after the council in a cial meeting Dec. 6 approved a $170,000 er from James Gould of Kansas.

Barring any unforseen snags, the city will e grossed $810,000 for its four lots when row closes on the final site in early 1986. Since the city's original purchase price was ut $685,000, the city sold the property for 5,000 more than the original price tag.

However, the final profit will not be wn for another 15 months, said City Ad- nistrator Doug Schmitz, who earlier this r predicted an approximately $40,000 pro-

To put the deal together the city had to sell 0,000 in "certificates of participation" m the Golden Bank of Sanwa in Los geles. The $990,000 includes $144,000 in reserves in the event any last-minute problems are incurred with the sale.

The certificates of participation come due in early 1987.

The profit for the city will come from interest earned during the approximately one and a half years the $810,000 in sales and $144,000 reserve are in the bank, Schmitz said.

The city has guaranteed $954,000 of the necessary $990,000 repayment for the certificates of participation. Interest no doubt will push the city's bank account to more than the $990,000 needed and any additional income will go directly to city coffers.

In an effort to reduce the number of buildable lots, the city and the private development firm of Tescher-LeVett bought the original 56,000 sq. ft. Gamble lot for a combined $1.4 million.

After a resubdivision of the property, bordered by Lincoln and Dolores streets and Santa Lucia and 13th avenues, Tescher-LeVett and the city each had four lots. The Tescher-LeVett property also includes the Gamble house.

Film buffs' assistance sought

Community volunteers to help with the monthly film series scheduled at the library in Carmel Valley Village are sought by the Friends of the Library, according to President Ken Yost.

The series was well-attended over the last five years, but will have to be discontinued unless an interested film buff will come forward as chairman, he said.

Duties include choosing the films from catalogues, ordering, publicity, running the projector and transporting the film to and from Monterey. Those interested in filling any of these jobs should call the library at 659-2377.

Children's Christmas program set

Children of all ages are invited to a Christmas program at the Pacific Grove and Monterey public libaries featuring storyteller and puppeteer Chuck Ashton. The program will be presented at 4:30 p.m. Friday, Dec. 20 at the Pacific Grove Public Library and at 4 p.m. at the Monterey Public Library.

Admission is free to the 45-minute program. For more information, call 373-0603 or 646-3930.

Argentine poet signs books

Argentine poet Lucrecia Cambas will be the guest of honor at a reception and booksigning at the Thunderbird Bookshop on Friday, Dec. 20.

Cambas, professor emeritus of Hispanic language and literature at the Monterey Institute of International Studies, now resides in Monterey. Poemas, her first book of poems, is a collection of sensitive, personal images that evoke nostalgia and hope, artfully using the Spanish language. The book is illustrated with pen and ink drawings by Christine Pearson Casanave.

The reception will begin at 7:30 p.m. The Thunderbird is in the Barnyard, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road, Carmel. For details, call 624-1803.

AT ROBLES DEL RIO LODGE IN CARMEL VALLEY

Con games revealed

'Tis the season to be jolly, for most of us. But for con artists, it's the season to victimize consumers — particularly the elderly — with financial scams.

To warn consumers about schemes that can devastate them financially, the San Francisco district attorney's office and Wells Fargo Bank have teamed up to produce a pamphlet entitled "Don't Be a Pawn in Con Games."

Written by the DA's consumer fraud unit and funded and distributed by Wells Fargo, the pamphlet outlines four common scams and offers tips on how to avoid becoming a victim.

"As bankers we know these con games occur, yet there is little we can do to prevent consumers from being victimized during a scam. Customers seldom want to tell their banker why they're withdrawing money, even if we ask," said William Robeck, manager of Wells Fargo's customer relations center. "So, we were delighted when the DA's office approached us about funding this pamphlet.

"We hope this pamphlet will increase consumers' awareness of fraud and help reduce the incidence of crime during the holidays and year-round," said Robeck.

The pigeon drop: The victim is induced to withdraw a large sum of cash from a bank to show "good faith" and share in a large amount of "found money."

The bank examiner scheme: The victim is urged to withdraw a large amount of cash from the bank to help a phony bank examiner, bank security officer or law enforcement officer catch an employee of the bank who is said to be stealing.

The home invasion scheme: Con artists gain entry into homes with a plausible excuse. Once inside, one culprit distracts the victim's attention while the other searches the house for valuables.

The automobile and home repair scheme: Con artists do auto body repair work to earn extra money. They promise car owners they can make repairs cheaply, but after the work is done, they say the job was complicated and charge an exorbitant fee.

'Wait till next year' says adjustments board

By NANCY HILLS

"CONTINUED UNTIL next year" was probably not what architect George Brook-Kothlow and businessman Roxy Rapp wanted to hear at the Carmel Board of Adjustments meeting Dec. 11.

But that's exactly what they got.

When the board found itself without legal counsel, it continued a request by Brook-Kothlow and Rapp to divide the single retail space currently occupied by Sprouse Reitz on Ocean Avenue into two, after the variety store vacates the premises Dec 31. Brook-Kothlow and Rapp signed a master lease on the property and plan to sublet the two spaces the division will create.

In addition to remodeling the interior, they plan to renovate the exterior of the building to the same style as the adjacent Mediterranean Market.

The lack of legal counsel prompted a continuance of the request, but didn't stop a seperate request by Books, Inc. for a use permit to move into one of the new commercial spaces created by the division.

City Attorney Don Freeman notified the board at the meeting that he could not advise them because of a "conflict of interest." Freeman said he also represents Wells Fargo Bank, administrators of the Silvey estate which owns the building Sprouse Reitz is located in. Freeman told the board he had also notified the bank of the conflict.

Brook-Kothlow and Rapp's request to partition the approximatley 6,000 sq. ft. store triggered the first application of a new city ordinance passed in August. That ordinance requires that uses for the entire building be included in a use permit which increases the number of retail spaces on the property.

Jerry Anderson, real property officer for Wells Fargo in charge of real property of the Silvey estate which owns the building, told the board that the bank was ready to discuss the downstairs Sprouse Reitz space, but there had not been time to consider any of conditions on second-floor portion of the building.

The use permit specified that the second floor be retained as a single commercial space until the use permit is amended, only three businesess shall operate at any one time, and water use remain the same or less.

Though there was no change planned for the second floor of the building, currently occupied by the Zantman Gallery, it was included on the use permit because of the new ordinance. While the bank was aware of the plans Brook-Kothlow and Rapp had for the first floor, inclusion of the second story in the permit was a surprise.

Brook-Kothlow's and Rapp's attorney, Anthony Zerbe, told the board that a delay would cause the applicants "serious prejudice" because of other commitments. The board, however, felt that it needed to ask legal counsel about the ramifications of discussing only part of the building in light of the new ordinance.

The division also brings into question the need for in-lieu parking fees for the two spaces. Because of the division of space, Brook Kothlow and Rapp may have to either pay the city in-lieu parking fees for six parking spaces, find off-site parking or provide parking on the site. Due to the age and location of the building, the last alternative is not considered viable. At a current cost of $20,000 a space, Brook Kothlow and Rapp would have to pay the city $120,000 in one-time-only in-lieu parking fees.

Board member Gene Hammond read from the General Plan, which he called his favorite reading, passages that stated one of the purposes of the plan was to encourage local businesses.

"I think that imposing the in-lieu parking fees will increase rents and discourage local businesses," Hammond said.

Swain answered him, saying the general plan also requires that "all new development provide sufficient off-street parking."

The board decided it could not discusss the application any further without legal counsel and voted to continue it to the board's next meeting in January.

Though the board didn't feel comfortable with discussion of the partition use permit, they did find that they could approve a use permit application of Books, Inc. Books, Inc. plans to move into one of two new spaces the division would create in the building. The bookstore is currently located in the Carmel Plaza and owners plan to move into its new Ocean Avenue location early in 1986.

"I think all of us have good feelings about the Books, Inc. move, and we don't have any problems with this," board member Tom Nash said before making the motion to grant the use permit contingent on the permit to divide the space.

The board voted unanimously to grant Books, Inc. its permit.

Earlier in the meeting Zigmont (Jody) LeTowt withdrew his request for a permit to set up a realty office in his building on Dolores Street near Eighth Avenue, but not before he gave the board a piece of his mind.

The use permit application had been submitted in August, LeTowt said, and had been continued since then.

LeTowt had applied for a combination investment, insurance, mortgage and real estate brokers office. The real estate office required a use permit, a condition LeTowt said was "discriminatory."

LeTowt told the board they impeded the property owner's right to reasonable use of his own property. If it "goes too far it can be recognized as a 'taking'," he said. The board, he added, can't do that without "just compensation."

LeTowt ended his presentation with a list of court cases he felt supported his position.

IN OTHER business, the adjustments board:

- Denied a use permit application by Doney Pavik and Diana Knight for a crafts shop on Mission Street.
- Denied a variance to Roger Dunn for front and side-yard setbacks on a property on Casanova Street.
- As the planning commission, the board approved an addition to the Carmel Foundation administrative offices on Lincoln Street and Eighth Avenue.

Spanish Bay conveyor belt hearing changed

THE MONTERY County Board of Supervisors has relented and will consider the Spanish Bay resort conveyor belt use permit application two weeks sooner than originally scheduled.

Supervisors Tuesday moved up the hearing to 7 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 14 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Because of a clerical error in noticing the public hearing, supervisors last week could not hear the application as originally planned so it was postponed to Jan. 21 — a six-week delay.

AT ROBLES DEL RIO LODGE IN CARMEL VALLEY

Con games revealed

'Tis the season to be jolly, for most of us. But for con artists, it's the season to victimize consumers — particularly the elderly — with financial scams.

To warn consumers about schemes that can devastate them financially, the San Francisco district attorney's office and Wells Fargo Bank have teamed up to produce a pamphlet entitled "Don't Be a Pawn in Con Games."

Written by the DA's consumer fraud unit and funded and distributed by Wells Fargo, the pamphlet outlines four common scams and offers tips on how to avoid becoming a victim.

"As bankers we know these con games occur, yet there is little we can do to prevent consumers from being victimized during a scam. Customers seldom want to tell their banker why they're withdrawing money, even if we ask," said William Robeck, manager of Wells Fargo's customer relations center. "So, we were delighted when the DA's office approached us about funding this pamphlet.

"We hope this pamphlet will increase consumers' awareness of fraud and help reduce the incidence of crime during the holidays and year round," said Robeck.

Here's a synopsis of the con games in the pamphlet:

The pigeon drop: The victim is induced to withdraw a large sum of cash from the bank to show "good faith" and share in a large amount of "found money."

The bank examiner scheme: The victim is urged to withdraw a large amount of cash from the bank to help a phony bank examiner, bank security officer or law enforcement officer catch a employee of the bank who is said to be stealing.

The home invasion scheme: Con artists gain entry into homes with a plausible excuse. Once inside, one culprit distracts the victim's attention while the other searches the house for valuables.

The automobile and home repair scheme: Con artists offer auto body repair work to earn extra money. They promise car owners they can make repairs cheaply, but after the work is done, they say the job was complicated and charge an exorbitant fee.

'Wait till next year' says adjustments board

By NANCY HILLS

"CONTINUED UNTIL next year" was probably not what architect George Brook-Kothlow and businessman Roxy Rapp wanted to hear at the Carmel Board of Adjustments meeting Dec. 11.

But that's exactly what they got.

When the board found itself without legal counsel, it continued a request by Brook-Kothlow and Rapp to divide the single retail space currently occupied by Sprouse Reitz on Ocean Avenue into two, after the variety store vacates the premises Dec 31. Brook-Kothlow and Rapp signed a master lease on the property and plan to sublet the two spaces the division will create.

In addition to remodeling the interior, they plan to renovate the exterior of the building to the same style as the adjacent Mediterranean Market.

The lack of legal counsel prompted a continuance of the request, but didn't stop a seperate request by Books, Inc. for a use permit to move into one of the new commercial spaces created by the division.

City Attorney Don Freeman notified the board at the meeting that he could not advise them because of a "conflict of interest." Freeman said he also represents Wells Fargo Bank, administrators of the Silvey estate which owns the building Sprouse Reitz is located in. Freeman told the board he had also notified the bank of the conflict.

Brook-Kothlow and Rapp's request to partition the approximatley 6,000 sq. ft. store triggered the first application of a new city ordinance passed in August. That ordinance requires that uses for the entire building be included in a use permit which increases the number of retail spaces on the property.

Jerry Anderson, real property officer for Wells Fargo in charge of real property of the Silvey estate which owns the building, told the board that the bank was ready to discuss the downstairs Sprouse Reitz space, but there had not been time to consider any of conditions on second-floor portion of the building.

The use permit specified that the second floor be retained as a single commercial space until the use permit is amended, only three businesess shall operate at any one time, and water use remain the same or less.

Though there was no change planned for the second floor of the building, currently occupied by the Zantman Gallery, it was included on the use permit because of the new ordinance. While the bank was aware of the plans Brook-Kothlow and Rapp had for the first floor, inclusion of the second story in the permit was a surprise.

Brook-Kothlow's and Rapp's attorney, Anthony Zerbe, told the board that a delay would cause the applicants "serious prejudice" because of other commitments. The board, however, felt that it needed to ask legal counsel about the ramifications of discussing only part of the building in light of the new ordinance.

The division also brings into question the need for in-lieu parking fees for the two spaces. Because of the division of space, Brook Kothlow and Rapp may have to either pay the city in-lieu parking fees for six parking spaces, find off-site parking or provide parking on the site. Due to the age and location of the building, the last alternative is not considered viable. At a current cost of $20,000 a space, Brook Kothlow and Rapp would have to pay the city $120,000 in one-time-only in-lieu parking fees.

Board member Gene Hammond read from the General Plan, which he called his favorite reading, passages that stated one of the purposes of the plan was to encourage local businesses.

"I think that imposing the in-lieu parking fees will increase rents and discourage local businesses," Hammond said.

Swain answered him, saying the general plan also requires that "all new development provide sufficient off-street parking."

The board decided it could not discusss the application any further without legal counsel and voted to continue it to the board's next meeting in January.

Though the board didn't feel comfortable with discussion of the partition use permit, they did find that they could approve a use permit application of Books, Inc. Books, Inc. plans to move into one of two new spaces the division would create in the building. The bookstore is currently located in the Carmel Plaza and owners plan to move into its new Ocean Avenue location early in 1986.

"I think all of us have good feelings about the Books, Inc. move, and we don't have any problems with this," board member Tom Nash said before making the motion to grant the use permit contingent on the permit to divide the space.

The board voted unanimously to grant Books, Inc. its permit.

Earlier in the meeting Zigmont (Jody) LeTowt withdrew his request for a permit to set up a realty office in his building on Dolores Street near Eighth Avenue, but not before he gave the board a piece of his mind.

The use permit application had been submitted in August, LeTowt said, and had been continued since then.

LeTowt had applied for a combination investment, insurance, mortgage and real estate brokers office. The real estate office required a use permit, a condition LeTowt said was "discriminatory."

LeTowt told the board they impeded the property owner's right to reasonable use of his own property. If it "goes too far it can be recognized as a 'taking'," he said. The board, he added, can't do that without "just compensation."

LeTowt ended his presentation with a list of court cases he felt supported his position.

IN OTHER business, the adjustments board:

- Denied a use permit application by Doney Pavik and Diana Knight for a crafts shop on Mission Street.
- Denied a variance to Roger Dunn for front and side-yard setbacks on a property on Casanova Street.
- As the planning commission, the board approved an addition to the Carmel Foundation administrative offices on Lincoln Street and Eighth Avenue.

Spanish Bay conveyor belt hearing changed

THE MONTERY County Board of Supervisors has relented and will consider the Spanish Bay resort conveyor belt use permit application two weeks sooner than originally scheduled.

Supervisors Tuesday moved up the hearing to 7 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 14 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Because of a clerical error in noticing the public hearing, supervisors last week could not hear the application as originally planned so it was postponed to Jan. 21 — a six-week delay.

SPCA closes adoptions before holiday

Because the holiday season is an unusually hectic time in most homes, the Monterey County SPCA will not offer pets for adoption on Monday or Tuesday, Dec. 23-24. A new pet needs special attention, the SPCA reports, and care that is often difficult to provide in the fast-paced environment of the holidays.

The shelter will be open for all other business and the public is welcome to choose a pet for adoption after Christmas.

Wealth of work clothes at Goodwill

More than 2,400 work pants and shirts, each priced at $1.75, will be available at Goodwill stores in the Monterey Bay area. This commercial donation was made by Mission Uniform and Linen Services Manager Ed Shivers.

The clothes are in a range of colors, fabrics and sizes. Some are suitable for street wear, while others are just right for the next carpentry, painting or yard project.

Joint study may resolve reclamation conflict

By NANCY HILLS

A JOINT study agreement signed Dec. 13 may finally bring an end next year to the on-going conflict between the Carmel Sanitary District and the Pebble Beach Community Services District over their respective reclamation plants.

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, Carmel-by-the-Sea, Carmel Sanitary District and Monterey County formally signed an agreement to commission a study of which of the two agency's planned reclamation plants will be best for the area.

The study will cost no more than $25,000 and should be finished in Febuary or by early March of 1986. Frank Dryden, an environmental engineer from Pasadena, has been offered a contract to conduct the study.

The study is designed to settle the question of which project the city, county and water district will support and help fund. It may also be used to settle a legal suit the agencies are involved in, Bruce Buel, general manager of the water district, said.

All of the signees are involved in a lawsuit against PBCSD over a reclamation plant it has plans to build in the Del Monte Forest. A court hearing on the lawsuit has been continued until March 1986, after the joint study is scheduled for completion.

The Pebble Beach agency was asked to join in financing the study, but declined. Stan Kawa, general manager for PBCSD, said his board had requested that the lawsuit be dropped and that the water district issue the permit the district claims the plant required as conditions for Pebble Beach joining in funding of the study. None of the conditions were met. PBCSD has, however, said they would cooperate with the consultant on the study.

The CSD has plans for its own reclamation plant, but it is generally agreed by the participants in the lawsuit that the market for reclaimed water could not support both plants. The agencies filed the lawsuit on the grounds that PBCSD did not grant them sufficient input on the environmental impact report PBCSD prepared for their plant and that the water district must issue a permit for the plant. Pebble Beach contends that it is a sewage treatment plant and not under the jurisdiction of the water district.

The Carmel Sanitary District currently treats (at its plant near Mission Fields) one-third of sewage from Pebble Beach. The sewage lines from Pebble Beach to the CSD plant run under Carmel streets and the city is concerned about the transportation of undiluted sewage through those pipes. The PBCSD reclamation plant would remove most of the water from the sewage prior to its transport to the Carmel plant.

A water district staff report to district directors states that the CSD plant would produce 2.4-million gallons per day or 2700 ac. ft. annually of reclaimed water. The estimated construction cost of the project is $13.7 million and a maintenance cost of $171,000. The Pebble Beach plant is projected to produce 550 ac. ft. of reclaimed water annually with construction costs of approximately $11 million.

Both estimates of the amount of reclaimed water the plants would produce are for normal years. In drought years, the production would be less.

The Carmel Sanitary District has applied for a $10 million low-interest loan from the State Water Reclamation Loan Program to help pay for the construction of its plant.

Pebble Beach claims to have funding for its plant through an assessment of undeveloped lands, referred to as Zone A, in Pebble Beach. The majority of the Zone A lands are owned by the Pebble Beach Co.

Reclaimed water from either of the plants would be used primarily to irrigate golf courses on the peninsula, the major portion of which are in the Pebble Beach area. The sale of the reclaimed water would be used to offset the maintenance cost of the plants, and the market may not be large enough for both plants to continue service.

Potable water that is now used to irrigate the golf courses would be freed by the use of reclaimed water for reallocation to the jurisdictions within the water district, an important factor in the water district's interest in the two projects.

"All the parties involved are truly interested in which project is the best for the area," Buel said.

Chateau Julien wins round one

CHATEAU JULIEN is entitled to accessory uses such as charity events, wedding receptions and wine-tasting, visiting Superior Court Judge W. J. Harpham ruled last week.

Harpham of Lake County sided with the Carmel Valley winery in its dispute with the Monterey County Board of Supervisors over its use permit.

Supervisors earlier this year had ordered Chateau Julien to halt the accessory uses basically because of traffic problems.

The key arguments for Chateau Julien were that such events are normally associated with winery uses and that Hacienda Hay and Feed, which previously occupied the location, generated more traffic.

Holidays are still heating up

The holiday season is still upon us, as if you didn't know! Christmas events still grab all the headlines on the society and community events front, so without further ado, here are some more for your perusal:

HOSPICE OPEN HOUSE STILL OPEN

The Hospice Resource Center Open House still has two days to run, today (Thursday, Dec. 19) and Friday, Dec. 20, at 578 Houston St. in Monterey. As part of the open house community members have been decorating the Memory Tree, on which they hang ornaments to honor loved ones who have died within the Hospice program.

This year's tree is a special one, also. It was discovered to have a form of "tree cancer" after it was brought to the center. The Memory Tree tradition began in 1982.

"Sometimes people don't want to decorate their homes after a loss in the family, and this is a way for them to remember their loved ones during the holiday," said Audrey Starr, center director.

A basket of needlepoint ornaments designed by volunteers will be available for those who do not bring ornaments. Cookies, coffee and tea will be served during open house. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A SANTA FANTASYLAND

The sights and sounds of Christmas are filling the Monterey Sheraton: poinsettias and garlands, Christmas carolers, gingerbread villages, 8-foot-high toy soldiers, Frosty the Snowman, and of course, Santa Claus and his elves.

Children can have a buffet breakfast with Santa, from 9:30-10:30 a.m., Saturday, Dec. 21 at the Three Flags Cafe, while carolers in Dickensian costumes will fill the lobby with holiday favorites at 1 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 22. Santa will greet children from 11 a.m to 2 p.m. every day from Dec. 7-24.

For more information call 649-4234, ext. 1605.

CONCERNED SENIORS CHRISTMAS BASH

The Concerned Senior Citizens Monterey Peninsula Club will hold its Christmas party at 1:30 p.m., Monday, Dec. 23 in the Community Room of the Monterey Public Library, 625 Pacific St. There will be Christmas carols, a Christmas story from Maria Nowell, a film, exchange of gifts and refreshments. For more information call 375-4472.

A CARMEL CHRISTMAS VIDEO DANCE

All teens of the Carmel area are invited to attend a Christmas dnce featuring music and videos from former KMBY disk jockey Matthew Arnett's Reel Rock, 7 to 10 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 22 at the Mission Ranch Barn, 14th and Dolores in Carmel. Help create a new Christmas video to send to homebound people in the area in the process. Advance tickets are $4 or $5 at the door, with $2 of every ticket going to Columbian Volcano Relief Fund. The event is sponsored by the Carmel Ecumenical Youth Ministries, including the All Saints Episcopal Church, Carmel Mission Youth Ministries, Carmel Young Life, Carmel Presbyterian Youth Ministry, Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula. For more information call 624-6846.

MID VALLEY'S ANNUAL SANTA DELIVERY

The Mid Valley Fire Department will hold its annual Santa Delivery from 3 to 5 p.m. on Christmas Eve, Tuesday, Dec. 24. Santa will deliver personalized gifts to your kids by way of fire truck that day. Parents should bring their children's gifts in by 5 p.m. Monday, Dec. 23 to have them delivered by Santa. Gifts must be wrapped and marked with the child's name, address and phone number. The Mid Valley Fire Department is located at 8455 Carmel Valley Road. For more information call the station at 624-5907.

CHRISTMAS IN HAPPYTOWN

Gateway Center for the Retarded will present Christmas in Happytown, an original musical celebrating the spirit of the holiday season, at 2 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 22 at the Pacific Grove High School Multipurpose Room, 615 Sunset Drive, Pacific Grove. Admission is free. Written by both clients and staff members, this soon-to-be holiday classic features more than 40 of the developmentally-disabled adults residing at the facility. For more information call 372-8002.

CHILDREN'S CENTER $18,000 RICHER

The Cypress Chapter of the Children's Service Center recently donated the proceeds of its year-long fund-raising efforts to the center. The $18,000 gift was raised through the chapter's major fund-raiser: catering at the Laguna Seca Raceway.

"The 30 active members all participated throughout the summer by baking hundreds of dozens of cookies and donating their time and work during race weekends," said Kate Rayne, chapter president. "We are very proud of the amount of money we were able to raise and hope to continue those efforts next year."

TWENTY PERCENT OPINION

BY HELEN ARNOLD
CARMEL CITY COUNCILMAN

What to do about the library?

The problems of the library are many and can only increase. They are not going to be solved by this council or any future council unless there is a spirit of cooperation among all those concerned. Solutions must be arrived at with a long-range view and with planning that reflects the conditions of today and the forseeable future.

In reviewing Mrs. Harrison's will and the opinion of Judge J.A. Bardin who probated it, "it is clear she intended to create a gift for the benefit of an indefinite number of persons, constituting such of the general public as were resident of, or such as might come within the community of Carmel-by-the-Sea." Further, "the library, with the usual library service, was deemed the essential thing, not the building alone, nor the books alone, or both without the continuous use of the public."

Could we reach into the past and talk with her and at the same time telescope time so she could view the present facility? I have no doubt she would throw up her hands in dismay at the crowded conditions the public must endure to use her gift, to say nothing of the difficult conditions the congestion and the five different levels forces upon our most gracious, adaptable, but put-upon staff.

When the present building was designed, a lovely and much-loved building resulted. However, while Maybeck was a fine architect, he was not a library designer, or he would not have allowed it to be built on five different levels, making it impossible for our handicapped citizens, and difficult for our elderly.

As to the location — in 1921 (the date of her will) Carmel was a far different and unpaved village. Today's conditions made the location on the main street of the most heavily-impacted tourist area in California a questionable and unsuitable choice.

The council possibly erred in buying three lots, which carry residential zoning, for the purpose of building an annex and parking garage which would only impact the area further. This is supported by the Environmental Impact Report.

It might be more intelligent to build a new facility away from the center of town, with plenty of parking available and set in a large and commodious landscaped area.

Our neighboring towns of Monterey, Pacific Grove, Seaside and indeed most towns, have located their libraries away from the shopping centers.

What I am proposing is a new library on the north field of Sunset Center and the retention of the Maybeck building as a Museum of Art and History. The reading room could be retained as a mid-village living room, and once again be free of the book stacks which damage the grace and ambience of that lovely room. The cost of duplications of periodicals would be a small price to pay for having a reading room at both locations. But the main library would be all at one locations, which all the library consultants agree is a more desirable and more financially feasible facility.

Advantages of relocating the library:

- Away from the congested center of town.
- Accessible to children and adults as well as the elderly and handicapped.
- Financial feasibility of having all facilities under one roof.
- Not utilizing R-1 property.

When this question was put to the voters in 1968, the initial reactions were favorable, until the mayor of that time suggested that the Maybeck building be converted to shops and offices. No wonder the public became alarmed and turned the proposal down. There was justifiable fear that the Maybeck building would be commercialized.

The second rejection was due to complex plans that involved too great a change, and the community couldn't accept that proposal.

However, today presents a different picture. Carmel is a lucky little town that a myriad of people from all over the country, indeed the world, desire to come to and in the process relieve themselves of a great deal of money, a percentage of which accrues to us directly in the form of various taxes. Each year those proceeds increase above our budgetary estimates. I feel we are justified in using those funds to benefit our citizens, and surely the library and its maintenance have a very high priority in that regard.

While the council cannot dictate how the library board spends its more than $1 million building fund, that would not be enough to provide the site, the building and the on-going maintenance. Again, we are fortunate in having the site at Sunset Center to offer them, which would not require putting the library in an R-1 district.

I also question their expending all their building fund on an annex that would forever perpetuate a divided facility — as well as not even meeting the needs as specified in the 1985 Holt Report. Indeed, it would not even meet the needs specified by the hired library consultant in 1979.

Since the citizens' questionnaire responses indicated a comfortable majority favoring a parking garage at Sunset, I would suggest a two-level rather than a three-level structure as I feel it would have less impact visually, and would generate less traffic. One entrance could be at Mission and Eighth where it is now, the second mid-block on Eighth. At the San Carlos Street level could be a large park-like setting with the well-placed library staff and the handicapped. I am afraid a three-level structure with the necessary excavation would be exorbitantly expensive, as well as being too obtrusive from the Mission Street side.

Think about it. A new library where it belongs, and a museum where it belongs. I think we can do it, and it would be a long-range solution which would be of the greatest benefit to our citizens. It just takes vision and courage in reaching a consensus.

I am not nearly worried about finding the money to accomplish our purposes as I am finding the wisest solution. That we must do, or we will have failed our citizens and Mrs. Harrion's intent, for generations to come.

CONSCIENCE OF CARMEL

BY GUNNAR NORBERG

The best place anywhere ever

As Christmas approaches and the start of a new year lies just beyond, the thought of a wish list comes to mind and new resolves strive for attention.

My own wish is that newcomers to this emerging Shangri-la will earnestly seek to know what foundations have been built here by those extraordinary persons who dreamed and labored and achieved a magic base for the human sanctuary striving still to rise in this place which so many in the world already call a miracle Carmel. And, once knowing something of those foundations and of the founders who built them, that those then-informed newcomers will themselves choose to add their own toil and their own inspiration to all that has gone before.

I remember a talk I had with the head of one of the biggest advertising agencies in the world who had just retired here to Carmel and who spoke enthusiastically about his desire to contribute his time and his effort to advance local ideals. Each other time we talked, this greatly talented man expressed the same intention — to add his cubit to what so many others had thought and dreamed and done — but a good many years later when this man died, his unfulfilled intentions died with him.

Much of what needs constantly to be done to forward the essence and ethos of what has made Carmel so widely renowned lies in what is called the political process, something which is held in too low a regard by many informed and intelligent people to permit them to consider seriously the idea of soiling themselves by taking any part in that denigrated "political process."

This reminds me of a talk on board ship given by a distinguished guest lecturer engaged for the voyage to speak to the passengers during a long South Pacific cruise. The lecturer was Paul Ehrlich, whose books about the dangers inherit in an unrestrained population growth have gained worldwide attention. Unlike most distinguished academics, Ehrlich emphasized the urgency of the need for all concerned people not to look down their noses at that much maligned "political process," but instead to get as directly involved as possible in that process before a menacing population explosion leads to worldwide disaster.

Sometimes it has been a distaste to venture into any kind of politically-related activity, which has kept interested and earnest newcomers here from getting involved in exactly the kind of local political activity which could be the most effective in furthering the kind of Carmel which had so attracted them before they had made the decision to come and with the thought of trying to help to achieve even difficult objectives. To newcomers with this sort of attitude I can only strongly urge that they give deep thought to the kind of advice given by Paul Ehrlich to that comfortably-situated cruise audience on board the SS Monterey.

Because Carmel has ventured farther, and for a long period of time, in new and often unexplored areas of community planning and community zoning, it has been — and it continues to be — an enormously difficult and altogether politically-related task to take each new and needed step in a human-sanctuary direction. It has, for example, been 14 years since I proposed in a special supplement to the March 4, 1971 issue of the Carmel Pine Cone, the Norberg Plan for a Heritage City. This has been before committees of the state legislature off and on in the course of the years and it has been the subject of many newspaper and magazine articles in cities around the country, and it has been discussed on many radio and TV stations at various times.

The idea is quite simple and — a hundred years from now — it could be as commonplace as it is now to accept the idea of bird and wildlife sanctuaries. After all, what I'm talking about in that Heritage City proposal of mine is that mankind should someday be able to accept the concept of protected human sanctuaries for itself. And, in my view, there is no place on earth better fitted to become the first, or the only, human-sanctuary site in California than Carmel itself and all Carmel-related areas both up the Carmel Valley and down the coast to and through Big Sur.

Once — back in 1978 when I was Carmel's mayor — the staff consultant of a local government committee of the state legislature prepared a detailed 40-page report in which all the legal problems that could stand in the way of the setting up of a Heritage City were explored. Also — without in effect actually comprehending just what it was that I was suggesting in the Heritage City Plan — he seemed to imply that quite a lot of what I mentioned could probably be achieved in some kind of approximate fashion through the usual prerogatives available through use of existing state law.

My answer to all that is that I wouldn't have proposed the Heritage City Plan if its purpose and intent could be achieved under existing laws. On the other hand, the probable legal problems which the plan could face are as susceptible to change as have been other such problems in many other matters which once had seemed impossibly insoluble.

Here, however, it is not my purpose further to belabor the questions about whether or not this or that part of my Heritage City Plan would be impossibly difficult to achieve. Instead I'm using that plan as an example to indicate in a general way what kinds of local problems would have to be solved in the future — the kinds which next year's or any year's new Carmelites would have to face and to try to surmount.

Here I do want to make an important point. There have been, and there are, newcomers of many past years, who have been, and are now doing their best to preserve what Carmel has achieved in years gone by. Sometimes their "best" hasn't been good enough, and sometimes a "best" out of the past suddenly becomes imperiled in a later "present."

Two such "bests" out of the past, which now stand in jeopardy, occur to me. One such "best" was put in jeopardy last Oct. 15 when the Carmel City Council permitted — and, strangely enough, by a unanimous vote — a motel (the Carmel Sands) to breach a motel-control law which had been in effect from 1958 to 1984 and which had held the line against motel-hotel proliferation in all that time.

The other "best" out of the past which has been put in jeopardy, was put in that jeopardy when the Deukmejian administration took office in 1983, and still continues in that jeopardy. That "best" now imperiled, was the restoration of the threat to drive a four-lane freeway down the steeply sloping and still-wooded Hatton Canyon at great cost when the existing Highway 1 between the Ocean Avenue intersection and Carmel Valley Road could be adequately widened at one-tenth the cost of that Hatton Canyon desecration. (The reason I call this a threatened "best" is that the Brown Administration was preparing to terminate consideration of any Hatton Canyon Freeway in the year 1982.)

In a lighter vein I would like to quote a bit out of an October article of California magazine. The article was titled "Why Carmel is Preferred," and the author was Gordon Lish, who is employed as an editor by a major New York book publishing firm, Alfred A. Knopf, Inc. Says Lish, who proposes that his vote would go to Carmel as "The Best Place Anywhere Ever:"

"Listen, the next best thing to actually being in Carmel, is talking about Carmel — even if when you're all done doing it you've still got to open up your eyes again and face the facts and just be in New York and be heartsick and miserable..."

And that's what I've been doing here, talking about Carmel while at the same time I'm living in Carmel instead of New York where once upon a time, for some years, I was a magazine editor. And how I would like to wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

For Christmas, all I want is...

WISTFUL YOUNGSTERS put on their thinking caps in a variety of expressions as they try to answer Santa's question of "What do you want for Christmas?" posed to them during St. Nick's annual visit to the Pebble Beach Beach and Tennis Club Sunday, Dec. 15. Above, Casey McFarland, son of Craig and Barbara McFarland, contemplates his wish list while below, Taylour Nevis, daughter of Jim and Sandy Nevis of Carmel Valley, is deep in thought about what she should ask for. The center has been in operation for a little more than a year and now offers adoption, counseling and foster care services for the children and families of Monterey County.

CANCELLATION NOTICE

A benefit dinner-concert for the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula scheduled for 6:30 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 22 at Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley has been cancelled. The concert was to have featured the Singing Boys of San Francisco and an "Olde English Christmas Feast." More info is at 625-0441.

BIRTHDAY BOYS AND GIRLS

Ryann Nicole Maloney, a girl, was born to Chiharu ("Butch") and Michele Maloney of Pacific Grove, Nov. 26 at Community Hospital. The reason we mention this is because Butch — one can only wonder where he got that nickname — is a building inspector for the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea. Congratulations!

CANTREE A BIG SUCCESS

The first (in what is hoped to be an annual drive) Christmas Cantree, sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Board of Realtors, Salvation Army, was a rousing success, what with easily more than 13,000 cans (some estimates went as high as 15-20,000 cans) collected at various peninsula realty offices and at the American Tin Cannery in Pacific Grove. The cans, which were donated to the Salvation Army, were assembled into a 20-foot tall Christmas tree in the lobby of the Tin Cannery building. While the Dickens Yuletide Quartet sang holiday favorites, cans continued to be collected Saturday, Dec. 14. members of the board of realtors (among them Larry Parent, Beth Hightower, Nikki McKee, Bill Dielman, Carol Sohm, Jean Voris, Tom Fleming, and Bill Cardoza) collected donations and helped the Salvation Army and its volunteers disassemble the tree. The Salvation Army, which was out in full force that day, will distribute holiday food baskets to hundreds of needy families and individuals on the Peninsula.

COUNTY SYMPHONY GUILD GALA

Another succesful event concluded the year for the Monterey County Symphony Guild, this one the "Black Tie and Pearls" gala dinner-dance at the Beach and Tennis Club in Pebble Beach Dec. 13. My how those guilders like pearls, which makes sense this year since it's the 30th (pearl) anniversary of the guild. On hand for the festivities, among others, were Sue Faber, chairman of the dinner-dance, and her fiance Steve Henderson; Irene MacKenzie, who designed the silver candelabra entwined with pearls and greenery that decorated each table; the ubiquitous Dick LaSalle and his band; Faye Schloss, the big winner for the night with a pearl ring from Henri Corbat; and of course, Gene Andrews, guild president, in a shimmering red paisley outfit. Another fun-filled success, from all reports.

UNIQUELY CARMEL

BY GLENN & MICHAELANNA CHRISTENSEN

A worldly affair with fudge

This week Ardshir Moarafy in Bander Mahshar, Iran will receive a box of fudge, as will Richard Hernandez in Honolulu; Satcha Hokahi in Tokyo, Japan; Amery Burleigh in Paris, France; Mrs. Putney in Athens, Greece; Charles Seibert in Hollywood, and Dr. Jerry Stevens (dentist, no less), Dallas, Texas. These people, and hundreds more like them, make up the worldwide aficionados of Mrs. M's Fudge.

A letter comes from London ordering a box of fudge for a friend in New York. A visitor from Australia marvels at the taste and orders fudge sent to friends down under. The recipes are secret. The chocolate orange is made with fresh orange peel, but the rest is known only to Harriett and Frank Macioge, the dynamic couple who own the manufacturing/retailing store, Mrs. M's Fudge, on the corner of Mission and Sixth.

Their romance with Carmel began in the early '40s when Harriett traveled here from her home near Lake Michigan to visit her brother, who was stationed at a nearby air force base.

SENDING FUDGE all over the world is one of the things that Harriet Macioge does best (next to making it) at Mrs. M's Fudge, which she owns with her husband Frank. (Michaelanna Christensen photo.)

She always made a special trip to Carmel, because being here made her feel so good. Like so many others, her painful allergies hurt less in Carmel. She and Frank visited many times over the years, so it was perfectly natural for this conversation to take place: Frank said, "Well, Harriett, I've been the general manager of this big country club for 45 years and it's time to retire. We love it here in Michigan, but if you want to move it's all right with me. Where do you think we should go?"

Harriett exploded, "Oh Frank, Carmel, of course, where else?"

So it was set. In 1977 the Macioges started the move from Michigan to Carmel. Their son, Frank Jr., was the key to the future Mrs. M's Fudge. Frank Jr. is a noted architect with offices in New York, Washington, D.C., and Lennox, Mass. At the very time Harriett was making the move to Carmel, her son was offered the opportunity to open a candy store. He had designed many successful candy stores in the South, but was not prepared to go into the business himself, so he said no. When Harriett heard about this offer she said, "Frank, don't say that. Your mother needs something to do." Mrs. M's Fudge was born.

By 1978 Frank and Harriett were moved, settled and selling their own famous fudge and English toffee and peanut brittle and chocolate peanut butter and chocolate chip whirl and English pralines, and lots more delectables, waiting to drive the candy lover crazy.

The last 10 years have been good to Frank and Harriett. Frank survived a five-valve heart bypass and now works every day. His skill making English toffee has developed a private following of his own. His surgery prevented a move to Beverly Hills that was being pushed very hard by the Rodeo Drive crowd. The lifestyle of Carmel fits Frank and Harriett very well. The magic is at work once more through marvelous boxes of fudge. Ardshir Moarafy will open his in Iran, and remember, if only for a moment, how good it felt to be in Carmel. Richard in Honolulu, Satcha in Tokyo, Mrs. Putney in Athens, Amery in Paris and Dr. Stevens in Dallas will stop, taste the fudge, see the little streets, hear the laughter, feel the love. Oh, it feels so good to be in Carmel.

Have a happy holiday!

THIS IS the last column before Christmas, so before we get down to business, I want to wish everyone out there a very, very merry and happy holiday. Give a hug and a kiss to those you care about and a gift that will last. Tell each one at least one thing that makes that person special to you.

YAY, DEBBIE!

DEBBIE TIERNAN will be guiding the Carmel Plaza into the new year now that she has been appointed the Plaza's property manager. (And, no, I'm not going to tell you what she's looking at.)

Actually, Tiernan is no longer the advertising manager for the Plaza. She was officially appointed to replace Kreg Baker as property manager on Dec. 12. It's a position she has been filling in since Baker left in November to pursue his dream of a owning and operating a child care center of his own.

There are certainly going to be some challenges for her with Books, Inc. planning to move across the street and the Joseph Magnin's space yet to be filled, but she's a plucky lass and will rise to the occasion. At least no one is pulverizing bank vaults in the Plaza right now.

Baker had the joy of going through the demolition of the old Bank of America location in the Plaza on the corner of Mission Street and Ocean Avenue. But that's over with and the two new stores, Fiori and Naturelle are open on the corner and humming along. Also, reconstruction work on water-damaged beams in the Plaza walkways have been completed, so things are a little more back to normal.

Tiernan said she has been in the Carmel area for 12 years and with the Plaza for the past two of those 12. Before coming to work at the Plaza, she was advertising director for The Crossroads. Her background, she said, is in hotel management and before coming to Carmel she sailed the sea (Mediterranean) working on private yachts. Plenty of good stories there, I'm sure, but I won't steal her best stuff.

Tiernan said she doesn't believe the Plaza will be doing any more major construction in the near future.

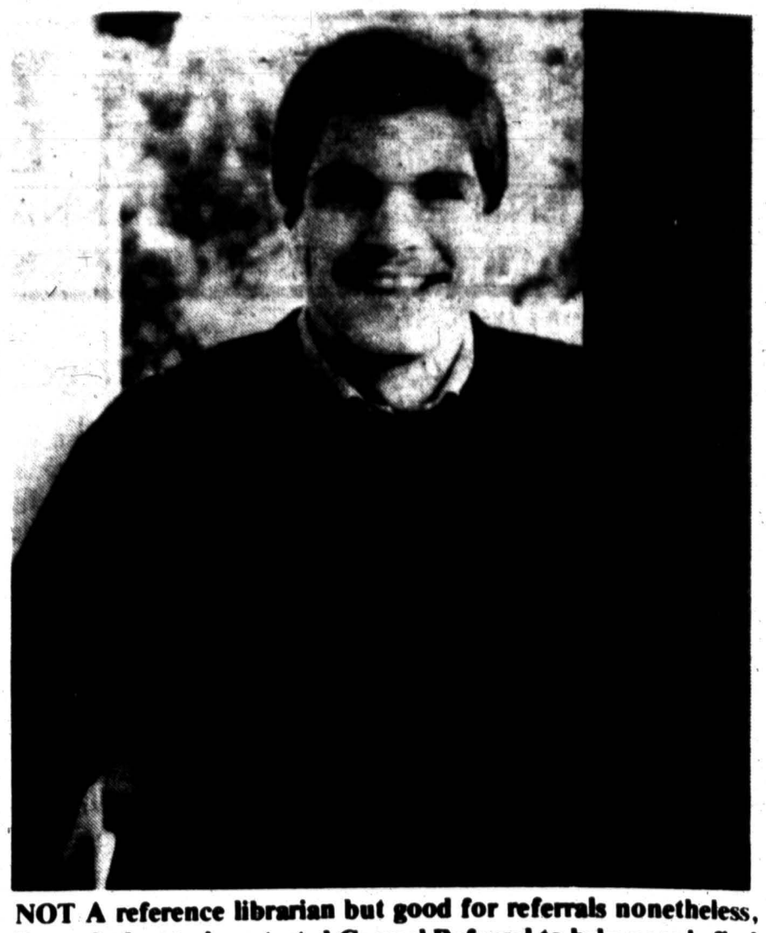
"I think we put so much time and money into renovation this year that we have only a few minor reconstruction projects to finish," she said.

Right now, one of the more important projects is to get someone to take over the operation of the Harbinger restaurant on the Plaza's lower level. The Plaza has purchased the restaurant from Jack Hakim.

The other big project, I. Magnin's expansion plans, has been dropped by the store. Magnin withdrew its appeal of a planning commission denial to the city council of that expansion.

For those who don't feel that the Plaza fits in with Carmel's image, Tiernan said, "There has been a lot of renovation and building in Carmel since the Plaza was built 12 years ago. I think many of the local people have learned to accept the Carmel Plaza. I think that people recognize the high standards the Plaza has imposed on the landscaping and the sincere effort of both the owners and managers to integrate into the life of the local people."

One of the ways the Plaza has contributed to the community is through contributions to local organizations. The Plaza, Tiernan said, contributed $10,000 last year to local charities.



NOT A reference librarian but good for referrals nonetheless, Bruce Indorato has started Carmel Referral to help people find everything from rooms to roofers. (Nancy Hills photo.)

WHO YA GONNA CALL?

Bruce Indorato is one busy young man. Not only is he the general manager for Vagabond's House, San Antonio House and Lincoln Green Inn, he is also the president of the Carmel Innkeepers Association and is a member of the Mayor's Ad Hoc Committee.

I guess he just found himself with too much time on his hands, so he opened a business of his own on Lincoln Street called Carmel Referral. The office is in Bonnymead Court, of course, not really "on" the street.

Carmel Referral can find a room for those in-laws that are coming, or can refer you to someone to fix the roof before they arrive, according to services Indorato said were listed with him.

For visitors, Indorato said his service can find guest accomodations and information on sightseeing, dining and shopping.

"The referral is at no charge to the guest what-so-ever," Indorato said. "What we have for them is free and complimentary."

Just tell Carmel Referral what specifications you are looking for in accomodations, and they will find it. The hotel or motel that gets the reservation pays a commission to Carmel Referral.

Indorato said that he believes the response from hotels in Carmel will be good because he will be referring out-of-town visitors to Carmel hostelries only.

There are plenty of referrals for residents, too, at Carmel Referral.

Indorato said that there are gardeners, maintenance people, contractors, landscapers, babysitters, yard persons, painters, roofers and more. The list will grow, no doubt, as time goes by. Referrals to these services are free to the resident; the business that gets the referral will pay the commission.

The businesses should be licensed and bonded when required, Indorato said. For occupations like babysitting or basic yard work he will talk with the people in the work experience program at Carmel High School.

"There also will be a bulletin board with all the business cards," Indorato said. "A local person can come in to look at them and talk to the staff (of Carmel Referral).

There will even be referrals to hotels and motels for local residents.

"We are also working with hotels in the San Francisco Bay area and the wine country," he said. "We will do the calling and booking."

WISHART'S STILL WISHART'S

Sometimes things just don't work out, and this is one of those times. Frank and Gloria Garnero are back at work at Wishart's Bakery where they have been for the past 23 years.

Richard Pepe, who was planning to buy the bakery, decided not to go ahead with the purchase. Usually, I don't report on a sale in process because so many times it just doesn't work out — for many, many reasons.

Anyway, the Garneros want everyone to know that they are back to their old tricks and will be cooking up a storm making their German breads and cookies, double layer cakes, tea cookies, stollen, special order cakes of all sizes, baking powder biscuits and all their Christmas goodies, (except English muffins). Even Mimi VanNoord will be returning to give them a helping hand.

SWEETS TREATS

Some of the local chefs and bakeries on the peninsula have banded together and whipped up candy gift tins to help others. They are not giving the candy away but taking the proceeds from the sales and giving the money to the needy children on the peninsula.

Businesses that organizer and chef Mark Cesario lists as involved are: Mrs. M's Fudge, Wishart's Bakery, Cottage of Sweets, the Lodge at Pebble Beach, Hector De Smet bakery, Whaling Station, Domenicos, and Restaurants Central's Sardine Factory. For "backbone assistance" Cesario listed Vern Ricketts of The Candy Parlor.

The candy can be found in little packages near checkout stands at many local businesses.

Cesario said that Mary Haltiner, chairwoman of community services, and the chaplain of the Naval PostGraduate school will oversee the distribution of the funds.

HUNTING LODGE ON THE CARMEL RIVER

Plans for the establishment of a fishing and hunting lodge at the head of the Carmel River were discussed at the recent annual meeting of the Del Monte Properties Co. The lodge is to be erected near the new San Clemente dam.

This dam will create a lake which will be stocked with fish, and as hunting is excellent in that locality the place should develop into a paradise for sportsmen. It is the intention to limit the fishing and shooting to small parties, so that the sport will always be good.

TENNIS COURTS ASSURED BY OFFER OF LAND TO CITY

Carmel is to have two tennis courts without delay and without opposition. Just in time to smooth all troubled waters and provide a project apparently commanding universal support, came an offer from Samuel F.B. Morse on behalf of the Del Monte Properties Company of a donation of suitable land in the vicinity of the Abalone ball park in Carmel Woods.

The idea of putting courts in the dunes was dropped like a hot potato when something more suitable was offered. The proponents of tennis courts crowding the council chamber to capacity at the Wednesday evening meeting, prepared to go to the bat, or perhaps to the racquet, for tennis courts, found opposition dispelled and good cheer and enthusiasm reigning, after Mayor Thoburn's announcement of Mr. Morse's offer.

THRIFT FOOD MART SOLD

Carmel will have one less grocery store by the first of next year.

Thrift Food Mart, on San Carlos Street between Fifth and Sixth streets, has been sold to Dick Bruhn, who owns a local chain of clothing stores.

According to Thrift's Jack Orchard, the store will change hands on Dec. 29. Bruhn bought the entire business, stock and all, Orchard says.

"We got an offer too good to turn down," Orchard explained.

Orchard says the reason for selling was that majority owner Myrtle Henderson (Orchard's mother) wanted to retire. Orchard plans to go to work for Vincent Bruno's Food Center on Junipero.

LOCAL REACTION IS MIXED TO JOHN LENNON'S DEATH

The shooting death of former Beatle John Lennon has brought a mixture of reactions to the hearts of Carmel's young and old.

It was a tribute to the fallen rock idol's legacy among the youth that students at Carmel High School mourned the loss of a hero who rose to fame before they were even born.

In honor of Lennon, who was felled by an assassin's bullets outside his New York apartment Dec. 8, the flag at Carmel High School was flown at half staff last week.

Early Beatle posters depicting cherub-faced John, George, Ringo and Paul were tacked up in Buzz Ranier's classroom and in other rooms.

Scrawled on a poster on the cafeteria wall was the epitaph — "Thanks to John Lennon For All You Gave the World, We Are Going to Miss You" — and below signed in many different hands were the titles of his best songs.

One student wore all black to school to express her sorrow for the loss of a rock musician who held a special place in youth culture as a pacifist and visionary.

Older members of the community expressed a somewhat more critical, dispassionate view of Lennon's death. While some compared its political importance to the assassination of John F. Kennedy, others complained that it was drawing much more attention than it deserved.

Carmel Beach fires given OK by forestry commission

By MAC McDONALD

IF MEMBERS of the Carmel Forestry Commission felt they were experiencing some kind of deja vu during their Dec. 12 meeting, in a way they were.

The commission had scheduled a meeting for Tuesday, Dec. 3, but because a quorum could not be present, decided to hold the meeting on Monday, Dec. 2 instead, which they did. The only problem was that they failed to notify the news media — which under the Brown Act is required 24 hours in advance — so they had to do it all over again.

The commission, however, more than just ran through the agenda for technical reasons, but instead held a full-fledged meeting in which they approved fires on Carmel Beach (in certain areas), identified 16 locations for trees to be planted along the proposed beach walkway and discussed the problems of conducting commission meetings after planning commission meetings, a situation in which an applicant often has approval from the planning commission before coming to the commission. Commissioners also managed to present flowers to outgoing commissioner Virginia Atkinson, who was attending her last meeting.

Commissioners (with John Davis absent) unanimously approved allowing fires on Carmel Beach, but only on the flat areas (base of the dunes to water line) south of 10th Avenue. Fire permits will not be required.

Fires are not allowed on the beach north of the center divider of Ocean Avenue, but according to Gary Kelly, city forester, people make them there anyway.

"There's a lot of charcoal there," said Kelly referring to remains of illegal fires.

Vern Allred, assistant fire chief, told the commission, "it would be nice to eliminate burning altogether," but conceded that may not be possible. He said the problem the fire department has with fires on the beach are not so much that they will get out of control, but that people are accidentally injured and burned by fires.

Commissioners, along with Kelly, also identified 16 approximate locations where they would like to see native Monterey Cypress planted along the recently-revealed Carmel Beach walkway. Stickers were placed on a huge Carmel Beach Restoration Project map identifying the locations. The map will be given to the beach consultant for consideration. Commissioners, especially Atkinson, was pleased with the progress of the walkway and location of the trees.

"As a member of the Beach Task Force I'm really pleased with you guys," she told her fellow commissioners. "I really thought it would take a lot more agony, but everyone agreed."

"I'm really pleased with the support of the residents of the area," said Kelly about input from residents along Scenic Avenue.

The story behind Santa Claus

miraculously revived three students from the dead after an evil innkeeper had killed them, chopped them up and set them in a vat of brine. It's probably a good thing that no Christmas traditions were handed down from that hideous little episode.

So the legend and lore of Santa Cluas continues, preserved for the most part not in a vat of brine, but by generations of believers in centuries-old traditions and mirthful myths and the passing on of these stories to wide-eyed and excited children around the world.

Even so, the image and stories of Santa Claus have been attacked and criticized by scoffers and disbelieving Scrooges, as among other things, anti-religious and a dangerous lie. But others have come to the aid of Santa and championed his cause.

One was Judge John H. Hatcher of the West Virginia Supreme Court, who said in 1927 to those wishing to be rid of the jolly old man:

"Let him be to succeeding generations as he has been to us: a joyous faith of childhood, a pleasant indulgence of parenthood, and a happy memory of old age."

A Merry Christmas to all, and may all your yuletide revels have Clauses!

OBITUARIES

John A. Gilliland

John Adam Gilliland, 20-year resident of Carmel, died Nov. 28 at his home in Del Mesa Carmel. He was 85.

Born March 19, 1900 in San Francisco, he attended schools in Oakland and the University of California at Berkeley. After a brief period of employment with the Matson Line, he worked for many years in the Los Angeles and San Francisco offices of the Hartford Fire Insurance Co. Following his retirement in 1966, he moved to Carmel with his wife.

He was active in the Green Thumb Club of Del Mesa Carmel and was a member and former president of the Bowling Team Club.

Survivors include his wife, Irene; a daughter, Joan Gordon of Woodland Hills, and two grandchildren.

At his request, no funeral services will take place.

Mark Patterson

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for Mark J. Patterson who died Dec. 8 at the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula. He was 35.

Born Nov. 18, 1950 in Oslo, Norway, he was a Carmel resident for the last 14 months. A musician, his permanent home was in Colorado.

Survivors include his wife, Karen; a son, Ian of Washington, D.C.; stepdaughter, Donya Hatcher of Carmel; sister, Patricia Patterson of West Newberry, Mass.; and mother, Mrs. Jefferson Patterson of Washington, D.C.

Memorial services will take place at a later date in Washington, D.C. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Hattie Vandervort

Private family graveside services took place Dec. 13 at Mission Memorial Park in Seaside for Hattie L. Vandervort, a Monterey Peninsula resident for 49 years who died Dec. 10 at Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital. She was 95.

Born Sept. 2, 1890 in Clark County, S.D., her last residence was in Carmel Valley, where she lived with a son.

She was a past president of the Monterey Senior Citizens Club and a member of the Seaside Senior Citizens Club, Monterey Grange and the auxiliary of the Seaside Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 8679.

Survivors include four sons, Lester of Priest Valley, Francis of Seattle, and Dale and Gene, both of Carmel Valley; two daughters, Vera Marcolli of Carmel and Rheo Lawman of Palm Desert; 10 grandchildren, 12 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren. Her husband Clarence died in 1973.

Elliott E. Bard

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for retired Marine Corps Brig. Gen. Elliott E. Bard, a peninsula resident since 1957, who died Dec. 6 at Driftwood Convalescent Hospital. He was 80.

Born Aug. 31, 1905 in Nome, Alaska, he served with the U.S. Marine Corps during World War II and the Korean War, earning a Distinguished Flying Cross. He helped map the Pacific Theater with aerial photographs.

A Pebble Beach resident, he was a member of St. Mary's-by-the-Sea Episcopal Church in Pacific Grove, the Society of Military Engineers and the Order of the Cloud and Banner of China.

Survivors include his wife, Ann; a son, Elliott E. of San Jose; and six grandchildren.

Inurnment services are planned for a later date at Golden Gate National Cemetery in San Bruno. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the American Cancer Society.

Albert O. Vogel

Private cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for Albert O. Vogel, a retired manufacturing executive who died Dec. 4 at Carmel Valley Manor medical unit. He was 84.

Born April 14, 1901 in Milwaukee, Wis., he was a graduate of Cornell University. He spent his working career with the Vilter Manufacturing Corp. of Milwaukee, where he retired as vice president of sales.

A registered engineer in Wisconsin, he also served in the Navy during World War II as a lieutenant commander.

He was a member of the Milwaukee University Club, the Wisconsin Club and Sigma Chi fraternity.

He moved to Carmel in 1973 and is survived by a sister, Alice Davis of Carmel.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the donor's favorite charity.

Amelia Carter

Private cremation was scheduled to take place, followed by scattering of ashes at sea, for Amelia Carter, a Carmel resident for nearly half a century who died Dec. 6 at Community Hospital. She was 103.

Born Aug. 20, 1882 in Quincy, Ill., she graduated from Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania in 1905 with both bachelor's and master's of arts degrees. She was active in the women's suffrage movement near the turn of the century.

She and her husband Douglas married in 1911, and moved to California in 1913 and to Carmel in 1936. The Carters had homes both in Carmel and Berkeley until 1945, when they moved to Carmel permanently. She remained in the home she and her husband built on Mission Street near 10th Avenue until 1981, a few months before her 100th birthday.

She was a member and former president of the League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula, a member of the World Affairs Council of the Monterey Bay Area, the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society, Friends of the Earth and the Carmel Foundation.

Survivors include her daughter-in-law Ruth Carter of Pacific Palisades, two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

It was 87 years ago that 8-year-old Virginia O'Hanlon of New York City, picked up a pen and wrote a letter to the New York Sun. She asked the most trusted newspaper of its time to "Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?" In 1906, the newspaper broke a longstanding rule of anonymity for its editorial writers and revealed, after his death, that Frank Church had been the author of what has become the most famous editorial in history. His reply to the little girl's letter ended with this paragraph:

"No Santa Claus! Thank God, he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

PETER (Norman Kaye) and Patricia (Wendy Hughes), share a moment of tenderness in Paul Cox's Lonely Hearts. This film is typical of the releases that receive exclusive local screening via the Monterey Peninsula Film Society.

Film society screens cinematic rarities

By ANNE PAPINEAU

FOR THE FOUNDERS of the Monterey Peninsula Film Society, history might be divided into two eras — B.V., A.V. — Before Video and After Video.

Screening two films per week virtually the year 'round in Morse Auditorium in Monterey, the Monterey Peninsula Film Society presents selections that movie buffs once had to drive to the San Francisco Bay Area to see. A glance at its hand-lettered, illustrated calendar of films is a testament to the diversity of the society's programming. The society's screen is home to the classic — works like Rossellini's Open City (1945); Chaplin's Modern Times (1936); and the contemporary — Scola's Le Bal (1984); Nicaragua, No Pasaran (1984). And the list continues.

While the majority of movies presented by the society are not available on videocassette, that medium has upped film rental costs and grabbed a portion of the audience from an organization that is essentially a labor of love for its co-founders, Dwight Marshall and Caryn Ecker of Carmel Valley.

These two avowed "film fanatics" founded the Monterey Peninsula Film Society seven years ago. In Marshall's words, "We got annoyed that if you wanted to see a good new foreign film you were forced to go to San Francisco or Santa Cruz to see it. We thought this was ridiculous."

The two began the society at Sunset Center in Carmel, and within six months moved the screenings to their present location at Morse Auditorium in the Monterey Institute of International Studies. The auditorium provides a no-frills film-going site. The seats are, at best, institutional, and no popcorn — gourmet or otherwise can be peddled there. But it is also the place to go to see La Cage aux Folles in the original French (with English subtitles,) or the peninsula premiere of Francois Truffaut's last film, Confidentially Yours.

'I think it's unhealthy to deny ourselves the opportunity to see what the rest of the world is doing. Because Americans are so physically separated from their heritage, there's a natural tendency to be isolationist. I think we tend to be that way with our art.'

Marshall, spokesman for the organization, as well as its projectionist and sometime film booker, laments the lack of choice for peninsula filmgoers.

"Most films screened on the peninsula are picked by somebody in an office in Hollywood," he noted. "We encourage people to give us requests."

Ecker and Marshall tabulate viewers' requests, review the choices available to them from about 15 film distribution companies, and then strive to work up a balanced seasonal film schedule three to four months before screenings begin.

The selection process boils down to "basically a matter of economics," Marshall said. "We can only show 16mm films, which limits us. Our typical rental price is $50 to $60 per film. Some films can go as high as $200. If a film is $500, just forget it."

Some films, he added, "are simply unavailable."

Add to those challenges the financial impact of the video market on the film industry.

'I still think you lose something on video. There's a chemistry engendered during a film showing I don't think video is capable of replacing.'

Many audience members simply rent a tape rather than attend a film screening, commercial, classic or otherwise, although Marshall makes an effective argument that there remains something magical about experiencing a film on the big screen with a live audience.

The audience lost to the video rental market has caused some classic films to be pulled from distribution due to lack of demand. To offset lost revenues, film distributors have felt the need to raise rentals, putting the pinch on small organizations like the Monterey Peninsula Film Society.

"Film is not merely an artform but a business," he observed. "There is a film from Yugoslavia — A Man to Destroy, a stunning allegory that American distributors have deemed unprofitable. Some real classics have disappeared in this country because of lack of demand.

"Most large theaters make their money off popcorn and Coca-Cola and the support of the chain," he said. "We depend completely and utterly on community support to keep going."

Community support takes the form of membership in the society and attendance at society film programs. Membership is priced at $25 per year, $15 for six months, and allows patrons to view all films for $2 each.

The Monterey Peninsula Film Society has raised its admission price only once in its history. Non-member admission prices stand at $3.50 general, $3 for students and $2.75 for senior citizens.

"We would have given up long ago if economics were going to rule us," Marshall added. "We just try to show films not otherwise shown in this area, plus local favorites."

One local favorite, most recently screened Wednesday, Dec. 18 is Yanco, a 1964 Mexican production that received 16 international festival awards. Yanco tells of an eight-year-old Mexican boy whose sensitive ears can't take the discordant sounds that surround him. It is shown with music and sound effects only — no dialogue.

SPYGLASS AT LA PLAYA

Camino Real at 8th / Carmel-by-the-Sea, California
Open Seven Days a Week / (408) 624-4010

Tickets can be ordered now for AT & T Pro-Am tourney

A variety of ticket packages are available for the inaugural AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, formerly the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

The $650,000 tournament will be played Jan. 27 through Feb. 2 at Pebble Beach, Cypress Point and Spyglass Hill golf courses.

A roster of celebrities is expected to turn out for the tournament, among them Clint Eastwood, George C. Scott, Jack Lemmon, James Garner and Glen Campbell.

Adding a "Crosby touch" to the AT&T are Nathanial Crosby, who will be playing as a professional, and his brother Harry, playing as an amateur.

The winning pro will receive $108,000 in prize money. Another $50,000 will go to the top professional finishers in the pro-am. Six low-scoring amateurs will be awarded Waterford crystal.

A sidelight to the regular tournament will be the "Shoot-Out at Pebble Beach" Jan. 28, sponsored by 3M.

This year six touring professionals will be invited to play five holes at Pebble Beach — the first, second, third, 17th and 18th. One player is eliminated after each hole until there is a winner at the 18th. Last year's "Shoot-Out" champion was Lee Trevino.

Among the ticket packages available for advance purchase are:

• The grounds and grandstand badge is $80. In addition to season badge privileges, this badge entitles the holder to a grandstand seat at the 18th green at Pebble Beach. Grandstand seats are limited and will be allocated strictly on receipt of application.

• A season badge is $50 prior to Dec. 31. After Dec. 31 it is $60. It provides entrance to the grounds and seven full days of practice and tournament rounds at all three courses.

• An any-day ticket book may be purchased prior to Dec. 31 for $140, a savings of $40 over daily ticket purchases. There are 12 coupons in a book and each one is exchanged at the entrance gates for a daily ticket, admitting the holder to any one practice or tournament day.

• Teenagers 13 through 19 can purchase a teen ticket for $10, which is good Monday through Sunday of the tournament. Children 12 and under are admitted free if accompanied by an adult.

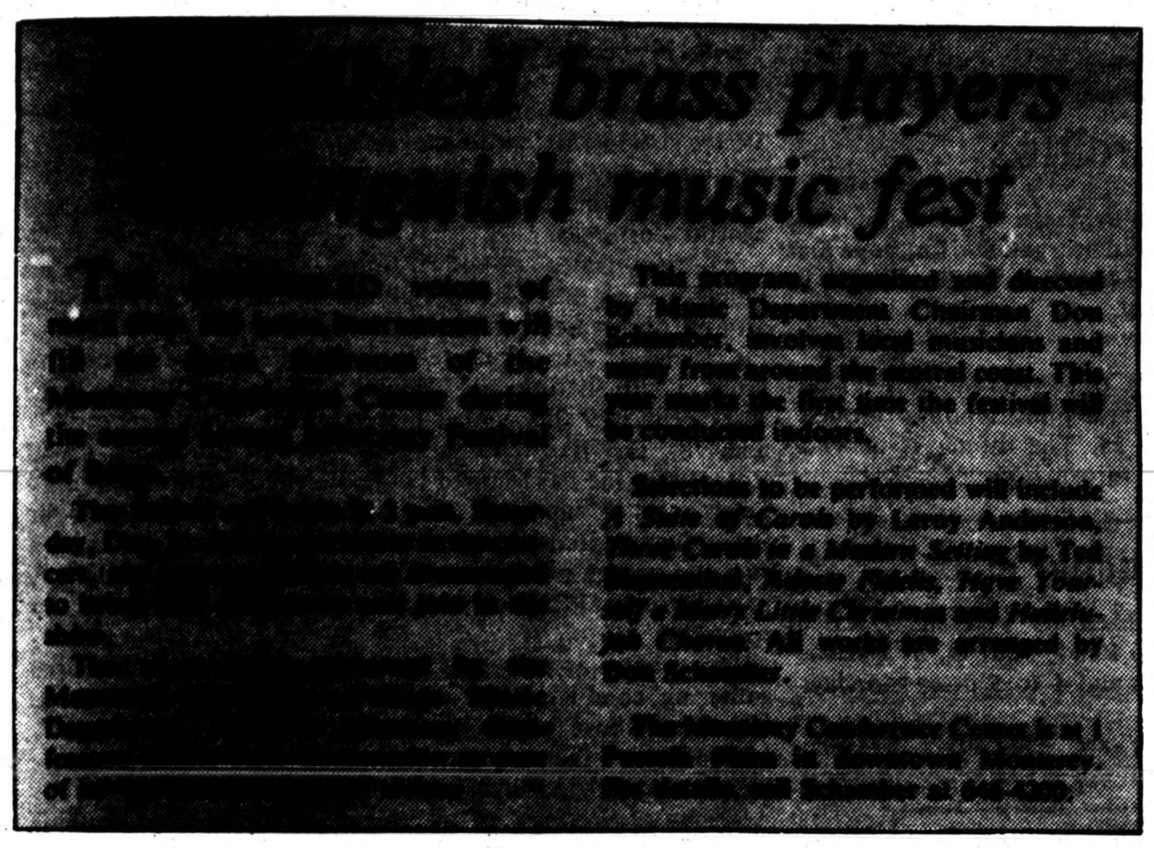
For additional ticket order information, call 372-4711.

String musicians present concerts

The Crossroads shopping village, located at Highway 1 and Rio Road in Carmel, will present two additional performances by the Monterey String Quartet this holiday season.

The Monterey String Quartet offers a repertoire that will include arrangements of many traditional Christmas pieces as well as other classical pieces. Monterey String Quartet members are David Dally, Margie Martin, William Rusinak and Jill Cohen.

The performances scheduled at The Crossroads Saturday, Dec. 21 from 2 to 4 p.m.



Society screens eclectic program of hard-to-find movie features

Also popular on the peninsula are works by such directorial giants as Akira Kurosawa and Rainer Werner Fassbinder. Fassbinder's Veronica Voss is scheduled to return to the society schedule in a few months, Marshall said.

"One problem we're having is the fact the product, especially in Europe, has been fairly poor in the last year or two. No one has come along to replace (the late) Francois Truffaut. It's becoming more and more difficult to make movies, period. Less and less are being made, except for a very safe product, so we've less experimentation."

Marshall said it worries him that audiences — be they film or otherwise — seem to have fewer and fewer choices.

"I think it's unhealthy to deny ourselves the opportunity to see what the rest of the world is doing," he said. "Because Americans are so physically separated from their heritage, there's a natural tendency to be isolationist. I think we tend to be that way with our art. It's an amazing fact — the last time I saw figures available — I heard only 1 percent of the money spent on films in this country goes to foreign films."

While many Monterey Peninsula Film Society offerings are American films, or at least movies produced in English, the majority of the films qualify as "foreign."

Marshall's profession is orchid grower, and even during a plant-hunting visit to South America last summer, he encountered the impact of film on a community.

"A few months ago in Ecuador, somebody brought a Betamax. The residents were watching American and Hong Kong kung fu movies. That was a film society — ours is a group fraught with tradition."

The next screenings of the Monterey Peninsula Film Society will be Les Comperes, shown Friday through Sunday, Dec. 20-22. Les Comperes is a 1983 comedy written and directed by Francis Veber of La Cage aux Folles fame. For more information about the society, call 659-4795.

AT THE CHERRY FOUNDATION

BY JANE WILGRESS

'Second Shepherd's Play'

FOR TWO successive years, 1956 and 1957, the Cherry Foundation sponsored, as a Christmas gift to the community, a production by and for children of the Second Shepherd's Play, the earliest of the English folk plays on the theme of the Nativity.

The play was given in the Golden Bough Circle Theater (what a wonderful little place that was!) in cooperation with the Perry-Mansfield School of Theatre and Dance, in three performances, and, says the reviewer, "a full house defied the Saturday downpour to attend the opening performance and seats were at a premium...the audience was welcomed by Mrs. Cherry, who gave a brief explanation of the background of the Second Shepherd's Play." Written in the 14th century, this play was, interestingly enough, discovered in Lancashire, the county in which Jeanne Cherry was born into a family named Yates.

The production staff for this play consisted of Charlotte Perry, director; Richard Bailey, stage manager; Polly Bowhay, assistant; Kay Goines, choir director; Gilbert Boyer Jr., flautist; Kit Jones, lights; Ginger Laky, book; and Geddis and Martin, costumes.

All these names are known to me — and some alas are no longer with us. But I wonder about the cast? Are there people around who remember taking part in what was, according to the reviewer, "an exquisite production"? These names are listed in participating: Judy Hensel, Phillip Woolley, Pat Bein, Jerry Zellhoefer (his mother Florence held classes here in 1977 and '78), Day Baird, Romi Wythe, Robert Broaddus, David Rosenkranz (he has lectured here), Wayne Wickhorst, Conrad Lewis, Kit Chapman, Toni Wolff, Betty Haak, Julie Broaddus, Stephanie Cummings and Aaron Rude. We have a fine photograph of the cast and I would be most grateful if any participant could identify themselves and/or others for our records.

Just about a year ago we held a beautiful memorial gathering, conducted by Father Charlie Moore, for Geraldine Houston, whose blithe yet thoughtful spirit is still greatly missed here — as are other friends who have died recently: Eleo Black, Gayle Burnham, Countess Claude Kinnoull.

Season's greetings to all our friends! We are looking forward to an active year in 1986.

THEATER REVIEW
BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

Apt choreography dramatizes Dickens' 'Christmas Carol'

HIDDEN VALLEY Music Seminars' Christmas present is a ballet treatment of Charles Dickens' beloved Christmas classic, A Christmas Carol, choreographed by John Pasqualetti, artistic director of Hidden Valley's dance program, with music composed by Larry Dilenger. The story is narrated, with appropriate and convincing changes of character, by Peter Meckel and Morgan Stock, and it is a special pleasure to hear again the opening lines of Dickens' own prose, the color and vitality of which are perfect stuff for dramatic reading.

"Oh! but he was a tight-fisted hand at the grindstone. Scrooge! a squeezing, wrenching, grasping, scraping, clutching, covetous old sinner!" we are told, and here is Scrooge, dancing with jerky, unlovely steps that aptly express his crabbed spirit, shoving children to the ground and menacing others, who lift their hands to deflect the chill blast of his anger. And our attention is caught; the dance is quite effective in establishing Scrooge's character and its effect on those around him.

The appearance of Bob Cratchit not much later contrasts mightily, for Cratchit's happy heart is as evident from his graceful movements as is Scrooge's stunted spirit from his ungainly though powerful kicks and thrusts. For the most part, the story translates well to dance, and sometimes adds dimensions only dance is likely to convey — for example, a surreal sequence in which Scrooge mends Tiny Tim's leg with a touch and watches him dance, only to see the spell broken and the lameness return.

The large ensemble of children and young people deserves special praise, for their grace and skill is matched only by their discipline, and they function not only as a chorus, commenting on and enlarging the action, but sometimes even as living scenery, forming, for example, a hallway and doorway for Scrooge's door knocker-cum-Marley's ghost, executing an inventive piece of choreography expertly.

PERFORMED WITHOUT an intermission, A Christmas Carol runs just an hour and 15 minutes, during which time it includes the major elements of Dickens' story. Marley's Ghost (John Norris) delivers his doleful message in chains, in a demanding dance that is well performed. The spirits of Christmas guide Scrooge through his necessary lessons, the lessons themselves are often conveyed in mime. For example, the Spirit of Christmas Past (John Norris dressed as a ghostly Pierrot) effectively mimes a happy, young Scrooge escorting a lady, then a stooped, older Scrooge intent on counting his money.

Bruce Wood's Scrooge looks too young for his part, but dances it extremely well. Wood's distinctive facial expressions, carriage, and gestures all convey the age and meanness his youthful face belies, and he, too, mimes well, falling exhausted into an invisible bed and lurching hesitantly through an upstairs window accompanied by the richly clad Spirit of Christmas Present. Ballet Mistress Louise Frazer Ingber brings grace, beauty, and skill to her roles as Belle, young Scrooge's fiancee, and later as Fred's wife, dancing the merriment of Christmas celebration. Ingber's Belle, dressed in satiny white that is almost a wedding dress, dances, with a delicacy and sadness, the heartbreak and disappointment of losing young Scrooge to his powerful mistress, gold.

Much more could be said of the production. Pasqualetti's choreography is always interesting, and the company is always up to it, and Dilenger's music has some really fine moments. The show is richly costumed in muted monotones — whites, grays, silvers — that are particularly effective in scenes of Christmas. Definitely worth the trip to Carmel Valley, and definitely worth bringing the children. Hidden Valley, as Dickens would say, knows how to keep Christmas well.

In rehearsal

JOHN NORRIS and young dancers rehearse the original ballet version of Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol. Choreographed by John Pasqualetti, the production concludes this weekend at Hidden Valley Theatre in Carmel Valley.

Stop smoking videocassette available

An easy-to-use stop smoking program is available on cassette for smokers who want to quit at home or at the office. Produced by the American Lung Association (the Christmas Seal People), In Control features Dr. Nina Schneider of U.C.L.A. and is based on the most recent smoking and nicotine research available.

The program requires 10-30 minutes a day for two weeks; you're taught how to quit before you actually do it, then are given specific tools to use in coping with withdrawal and maintenance of a new nonsmoking lifestyle. Emphasis will be on stress reduction, coping with social situations, and weight management, with a 14-day weight maintenance plan included.

In Control, on VHS tape, is designed for use in hospitals, the workplace, senior centers, neighborhood associations, churches or in the privacy of your own home. It helps make quitting seem easy and fun, especially when done with a group of friends or co-workers. For details, call 757-5864.

Peninsula restaurateurs serve culinary gifts

CHRISTMAS CHEER will be generated not only around the home fires this year but also in a cross-section of Monterey Peninsula restaurants. There curious diners will find the most traditional of feasts as well as adventurous menus that make use of seasonal ingredients. The following list serves as a guide to many of the best Christmas feasts available locally. Remember to call in reservations to those restaurants that require them.

Carmel

Swiss Tavern, Lincoln Street and Fifth Avenue, will offer three Christmas dinner specials along with the regular menu. Roast turkey with all the trimmings is $12.95, and roast goose and prime rib are both priced at $14.95. Serving hours will be 3 to 8 p.m. For reservations call 625-5994 and ask for Heinz.

Three special entrees will be served on Christmas Day at Spyglass at La Playa, Camino Real at Eighth Avenue. A relish plate will begin the meal, followed by consomme of wild mushroom and a tossed green salad. A choice of turkey, salmon or sliced sirloin will be offered as the main course and a dessert selection from the chef's pastry cart concludes the meal. Dinner will be served at 2, 4:30 and 7 p.m. Prices are $16.95 for turkey and $18.50 for salmon or sliced sirloin. For reservations call 624-4010.

Jack London's Bar and Bistro, San Carlos Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues in The Mall, will be serving a feast from 4 p.m. to midnight on Christmas. Featured along with a complete dinner menu will be prime rib with baked potato and vegetable, $12.95; Cornish game hens with orange sauce, parsleyed potato and vegetables, $8.95; turkey breast with mashed potatoes and gravy, stuffing and vegetable, $17.95; and baked ham with raisin sauce, parsleyed potato and vegetable for $8.95. All dinners include soup, salad, bread and dessert (featuring pumpkin or apple pie). Turkey and ham dinners are half-price for children under 12. Bar opens at 3 p.m. Reservations accepted by calling 624-2336.

A Christmas buffet will be served from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. at The Topiary in the Carmel Mission Inn, Highway 1 at Rio Road, across from The Crossroads and behind the Barnyard. The buffet will feature roast prime rib, bacon and roast turkey, plus a salad bar. For dessert, indulge in blueberry trifles or chocolate mousse. Buffet price is $12.95; children under 10 years old, $6.50. Breakfast will also be served from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Christmas. 624-3399.

Order from the full menu Christmas Day at Fish House on the Park, Junipero and Sixth avenues. Reservations are required for dinner, served from 6 to 9 p.m. The menu includes live Maine lobster, chicken Johanna, fettucine Pacifica and lamb chops. All fish is fresh, never frozen, and can be ordered broiled over mesquite. The restaurant also boasts a full bar and an extensive wine list. 625-1766.

Sans Souci, Lincoln Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues, will serve a set menu from 2 p.m. with last reservations taken for an 8 p.m. seating. Dinner begins with wild mushroom soup garnished with fresh whipped cream and toasted hazelnuts, Sans Souci salad, a choice of roast turkey with homemade dressing and giblet gravy or roast leg of lamb with fresh thyme; fresh homemade cranberry sauce, puree of Louisiana yams and apples, a medley of garden vegetables and a choice of apple or pumpkin pie for dessert. The complete dinner is $14.95 for the turkey and $15.95 for the lamb. Child's plate is $10.50. Reservations are advised. Call 624-6220.

Spalding Pro-Am draws stellar players

With five of the top money winners from the 1985 Ladies' Professional Golf Association Tour and eight of the top 20 already entered, the 14th annual Spalding Invitational Pro-Am will have its strongest distaff field.

The $200,000 Spalding Pro-Am kicks off the new golf year Jan. 2-5 over the Del Monte, Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club and Pebble Beach courses.

It is the only tournament in the world which features men and women in head-to-head individual competition for equal prize money.

Alice Miller, No. 3 on the list, Patty Sheehan (5), Jane Blalock (7), Beth Daniel (8), and Jan Stephenson (10) have confirmed their entries for the upcoming Spalding, as have Muffin Spencer-Devlin (12), Val Skinner (14) and Juli Inkster (19).

Joining them will be Sally Little, who was in the initial Spalding women's field in 1978 and has recovered from injuries which slowed her down the past two years. Little, Amy Alcott, Hollis Stacy and Debbie Massey were the four women who made golfing history seven years ago.

Daniel, Spencer-Devlin and Skinner will be making their debuts in the 1986 Spalding, which already includes defending champion Peter Oosterhuis, former winners Johnny Miller and Al Geiberger, and Craig Stadler and Greg Norman.

The nine women earned $1.5 million among them on the 1985 tour, winning a combined total of 13 tournaments. Little, who has 14 career victories, is the only 1985 non-winner this year in the women's field.

Miller won four times this year. Sheehan and Blalock each won twice, with Blalock's second victory coming in the season-ender, earlier this month, in the Mazda Japan Classic. It was her 28th career triumph.

The nine women, who comprise not only the strongest but also the largest LPGA field in Spalding history, have won a combined total of 96 tournaments.

Spencer-Devlin, the one-time fashion model turned touring pro, won her first LPGA crown this year in the Mastercard. Skinner also picked up her first tournament victory in the Konica-San Jose Classic.

Blalock heads the list with 28 victories, followed by Sheehan, Little and Daniel with 14 each, Stephenson with 13, Miller with seven, Inkster with four, and Spencer-Devlin and Skinner with one each.

Advance season tickets are now on sale, priced at $20 for all four days, going to $30 Dec. 27.

Guess who's coming to dinner?

Fleas. Lots of fleas. They're eating your pet alive. You know your pets have fleas when they itch and scratch. But, did you know, with fleas they may also have tapeworms, be anemic, susceptible to skin infection and allergic reactions? Worst of all, they can't tell you.

Discourage this unwanted guest. Routine use of medicated powders, sprays and shampoos will help, but you must deflea both your pet and your home, or the fleas will keep coming back. If your dog shows an allergic reaction—small bumps or scabs, redness, or dandruff-like scales—contact your veterinarian.

No dog deserves to play host to a greedy and ungrateful dinner guest.

Pianists compete for prize money

PIANISTS will compete during the 10th annual Carmel Music Society Competition. Deadline for entry is March 8, 1986.

The society, oldest non-profit concert organization of the Monterey Peninsula, sponsors a competition for young artists annually. Focus of the program changes every year. Instrumental competition is scheduled in 1987, and vocal competition in 1988.

The piano competition is open to pianists between the ages of 18 and 30. The $2,500 grand prize will consist of a $1,500 cash award and $1,000 contract to appear the following year in the Carmel Music Society's subscription series.

A $750 second prize, $500 third prize and five $100 prizes will also be awarded.

Final auditions and an awards concert will take place April 26, 1986 at Sunset Center in Carmel. The auditions will begin at 10:30 a.m. and each finalist will perform a 25-minute program. At 8 p.m., the grand prize winner and selected finalists will be presented in an evening awards concert.

Contestants must be California residents or full-time students in California.

Interested applicants may apply to:

Chairman, Competition Committee; Carmel Music Society, Box 1144; Carmel, CA 93921.

Monterey adobes welcome Christmas revelers

CALIFORNIA'S 19th century heritage will be recalled in downtown Monterey during the Christmas in the Adobes celebration Thursday and Friday, Dec. 19-20.

The two-day open house showcases the historic structures in a holiday light. Each adobe will feature a different festive notation of the holidays, from food, to decorations to entertainment. Now in its second year, this adobe tour has expanded to include nine of Monterey's historic buildings, each decorated in a different theme to match the original resident or time period it represents.

A path of Mexican-style luminaria will guide visitors from one building to the next to enjoy refreshments, music and greeting with the various 19th century costumed volunteers.

Hours are 5 to 9 both nights. The decorated adobes will also be open daily according to their regular schedules. Admission fee is $4 for adults, $1 for children ages 6 to 17.

Sponsored jointly by the California State Parks Department and the Old Monterey Preservation Society, the tour reflects both whimsy and authenticity in its decorations. The Larkin House, for example, will feature a New England style decor, while the Stevenson House (home of author Robert Louis Stevenson) will carry a Scottish Christmas theme in keeping with Stevenson's birthplace.

Following is a list of the buildings featured during the 1985 Christmas in the Adobes celebration.

LARKIN HOUSE, 510 Calle Principal in Monterey, will be decorated New England-style during the two-day Christmas in the Adobes celebration in downtown Monterey. Food and music will greet visitors to many of Monterey's historic structures.

■ Casa Serrano, 412 Pacific St. Participate in an old-fashioned family Christmas with music and caroling around the piano.

■ Casa Soberanes, 336 Pacific St. The aroma of hot Mexican chocolate fills the Christmas air of this Mexican-styled home.

■ Colton Hall Museum, Pacific Street. Enjoy harp music, refreshments and Christmas decorations at historic Colton Hall.

■ Cooper-Molera Adobe, Polk and Munras. This newly restored building includes a skylight room and a kitchen furnished and decorated for Christmas.

■ Custom House, Custom House Plaza at Wharf No. 1. Experience California's first custom house lit by candlelight and decorated in a Mexican theme.

■ House of the Four Winds, 540 Calle Principal. Enjoy a Christmas for children with Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus distributing candy canes and good cheer.

■ Larkin House, 510 Calle Principal. The beauty of the Larkin House is enhanced with decorations of a traditional New England Christmas.

■ Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, 559 Pacific St. The Christmas spirit is kinded in Jananne Lassetter's "Kinetic Paintings" and numerous other exhibitions.

■ Old Whaling Station, 391 Decatur St. Costumed members of the Junior League will host a Victorian Christmas with music and refreshments.

■ Stevenson House, 530 Houston St. A Scottish theme will highlight the evening, complete with music and refreshments.

For additional information about the second annual Christmas in the Adobes, call 649-1770.

'Les Comperes' shown in Monterey

The Monterey Peninsula Film Society will screen Les Comperes, a 1983 French film written and directed by Francis (La Cage Aux Folles) Veber, Friday through Sunday, Dec. 20-22. In this comedy Christine (Anny Duperey) unites two former lovers, Lucas (Gerard Depardieu) and Pignon (Pierre Richard) in a search for her 17-year-old son who has gone to the Riviera with his girlfriend.

How they retrieve him is the stuff of which comedy is made.

Shown in French with subtitles, Les Comperes begins 8:15 p.m. in Morse Auditorium, 440 Van Buren St., Monterey. Tickets are $3.50 general, $3 students, $2.75 senior citizens and $2 for film society members. For details, call 659-4795 between 5 p.m. and show time.

AIDS information available

A new tape on acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) has been added to the library of medical information tapes available by calling Tel-Med, operated by the Auxiliary of Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

The new tape was written by Dr. Geraldine Taplin, an infectious disease specialist who is a member of the Community Hospital medical staff. It explains the disease mechanism and discusses diagnosis and prevention of AIDS.

The latest tape in the Tel-Med library substitutes for an earlier tape which had become outdated, and was written and produced at Dr. Taplin's initiative, Ale said. There are now 320 tapes in the Tel-Med library.

The AIDS tape, and a wide selection of other tapes on medical and health subjects, may be heard by calling 624-1999 from 9 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Sunday.

To hear the AIDS tape, ask for tape number 571.

ART NOTES
BY SAM COLBURN

Remembering the School of Carmel

SCHOOLS OF ART obviously develop where there is a community of interest among artists. In other words they share certain concepts. These ideas usually are a reaction to art that is not only dominant but static. More deeply than that, the new imagery grows from a prescient change in society.

The emergence of Impressionism resulted in the timely demise of the School of the Academy. What the world needed was a fresh, new vision, and after a few defeats the Impressionists came on strong. With time people do see with different eyes, but of all the movements in art this one seems the most popular. It was a great victory for color and for individual imagery.

Although I have not seen any recognition of the idea, I would certainly suggest that there was a Carmel School. This was not a movement that influenced the world, but the artists involved did share certain concepts. What they had in common was a magnificent meeting of land and sea, and a desire to be alone and work with those elements. Not only that, they had a need to get away from the society of cities. This breaking away did, in fact, create a kind of island in art which is one reason why the School of Carmel was not recognized.

As these artists were, for the most part, involved with nature their work is not about people. This was not true of Armin Hansen. People here went down to the sea in ships, and we have very poignant etchings by him about fishermen. These pioneers in local art founded the Carmel Art Association. They are all gone now and the School of Carmel is over. The galleries of the Association do still present the most interesting work of the area although the artists now now do not have the same bond with land and sea.

THE MONTEREY County Juried Art Exhibition at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art is an intriguing show. It is varied and no one approach dominated the selection unless one uses that very vague term, "abstraction." I believe there is only one painting that could be called "representational." It is a mixed media show, and I feel that sculpture was slighted. The judge was Fred Martin, and he had the formidable task of selecting, as I understand it, from more than 500 pieces submitted.

Gertrude Stein is quoted as saying that "a good picture is one that you go back and look at." This is a simple but profound statement. In this exhibition there are a number of paintings like that. I would refer, for instance, to Ian Graham's "Warhurst Railway Bridge Twice." In this work which is painted with acrylic and ink there is a marvelous quality of filtered light.

"Moving Thru" is an acrylic painting by Clayton Pinkerton which is a tour de force in red. I had not seen ceramic before that was mounted as a picture, but Jeremy Jernegan has done it with "Untitled II." Justine Weber has painted a large oil that is full of ghosts. It is satiric and entitled "Mores II."

"Sam's Porch," done by Gerald Richman, is a fine oil with good use of cool and warm color. Among the watercolors I like "Reflection Pool" by Ruth Hickok-Schubert. This painting is in black and white so as to speak, but the forms are unusual, making the use of space exciting. Barbara Johnson is an artist whose "Red Breeze," a relief print, shows that she is a graphic intellectual.

This is a rich show and well rounded. I was particularly happy to see Carolyn Berry's books in which she paints and writes. I thought a couple of paintings hung in this show were pedestrian in imagery, and I missed a lot of familiar faces.

Louise Cardeiro Boyer has been an active artist here for many years, and there are not many of us who have had her experience both within and outside of these United States. Art south of the border is so different. Mexican artists, in particular, have been strong on social and political content.

Her show, currently in the Center Gallery of the Carmel Art Association, will be on the walls through Jan. 2. These paintings are all about life of the sea as it was revealed to her in an aquarium. They are oil and mixed media paintings. Many of them have a very rough texture which enables her to catch the points with pigment. It is because of layering that she is able to give the impression of depth in water and also color as seen through water.

In "Pier Huggers" one gets the feeling of fish swimming around the piles that support a wharf. "Ondine" is cool and there is the suggestion of hidden life. The colors of fish are very brilliant under water, and her "Bullet" is concerned with this iridescence. Again in "Ensemble" she gets the quality of swirling motion. "Sea Flowers" is a much more delicate work in which Louise has used pastel hues, and gave me the sensation of looking upward toward the surface.

Among the new members of the Carmel Art Association is Susan Reith. She is showing several oils in the entrance lobby. Although the influence of Victor Di Gesu may be felt, I was very impressed with the lush strokes of paint. We do not have many painters like that now. It reminds me of Richard Lofton who used to mix the colors left on his brush in a big pile on his palette. He used this melange with great gusto. His paint was juicy, such a confirmation of the sensuality of oil.

OGLE GALLERY and Graphics in Carmel announces the release of its latest serigraph, California Coast No. 4. A percentage of each sale goes toward the Big Sur Land Trust to help preserve Big Sur land. The 28-color serigraph by Carmel artist James Orlando Ogle measures 24-by-38 inches and is published in an edition of 63. Ogle Gallery and Graphics is in Redwood Court on Mission Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues in Carmel. For details, call 625-6688.

Oriental art principles taught

Anita Benson will offer instruction in "Oriental Principles of Art," a class presented Jan. 2-22 by the Monterey Peninsula College Art Department.

Slide lectures and studio practice distinguish this course, which will demonstrate eight principles of Oriental art. These principles include the study of Notan (dark/light balance), space relationships in Japanese prints and Sumi brush work.

Benson holds a master's degree in art, and completed her thesis on Japanese prints. For details, call MPC or 649-4657.

Pugsley watercolors shown in Valley

The Carmel Valley Library will feature a show of watercolor paintings by Aromas artist Tom Pugsley. The show will be up through December at the library, 65 W. Carmel Valley Road in the Village.

At Monterey museum...

Viewers rearrange 'Arts Parts' components

ARTWORK for children of all ages, "Arts Parts" by Jananne Lassetter, is now on display in the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

The exhibition, curated by Museum Associate Curator/Registrar Rick Deragon, features magnetized cutouts and paintings on canvas backed by metal. Visitors to the museum will be able to arrange the cutouts on the paintings.

"Some of the results are pretty strange, but several people, including children, have...produced more impressive art than a lot of artists in just a couple of minutes," Lassetter said during one of her previous exhibitions.

The results of participants' groupings are interesting in that different groups of people — little boys as opposed to little girls — present radically different arrangements of objects on the paintings, Deragon observed.

This "exercise in design," he explained, "is an opportunity to observe human nature at its entertaining best as museum-goers alter each composition as they wish: interchanging components and creating strong juxtapositions, well-balanced compositions, or just plain goofy pictures for fun."

Lassetter, as an artist and educator, designed the work to show that "learning is doing." Her own education includes private instruction in Japan and studies at the University of Texas at Austin; the University of Colorado in Boulder; the University of Bonn and the Academy of Fine Art in Munich. Her work has been displayed throughout the United States as well as in Germany and is included in a number of private collections throughout the United States and Germany.

Her work in the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, at 559 Pacific St. in Monterey, will remain on display through Jan. 12. It can be seen — and rearranged — free of charge Tuesdays through Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays from 1 to 4 p.m.

JANANNE LASSATTER'S Arts Parts includes magnetic moveable pieces to be arranged by viewers. It can viewed through Jan. 5 at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, 559 Pacific St. in Monterey.

Painting exhibit takes its cue from the sculpture of Kim Thoman

RECENT paintings by Kim Thoman will remain on display in the Monterey Conference Center through Jan. 8.

The exhibition, curated by the staff of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, features work from a continuing series which evolved from Thoman's earlier mixed media sculpture, the painter explained.

"Up until about seven years ago, I was doing ceramic sculpture. In this new work, I'm combining oil and acrylic side by side. That's my way of enhancing the contrast that I'm trying to get at in the paintings," she added.

"That contrast," she continued, "is sort of the inner landscape of our inner intuitive or emotional world, which I symbolize with the figure."

Thoman's art training includes her B.A. from U.C. Berkeley and her M.A. from San Francisco State University. She has, since 1981, been teaching at three San Francisco Bay Area colleges, and her art work has been exhibited throughout Northern California since 1978.

Her exhibition in the Alvarado Lobby of the Conference Center, at 1 Portola Plaza in downtown Monterey, can be seen free of charge Mondays through Fridays, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

RECENT PAINTINGS by Kim Thoman are currently on display in the Monterey Conference Center, downtown Monterey. The exhibition, which will remain on display through Jan. 8, was curated by the staff of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art receives full accreditation once more

The Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art has again been accredited by the American Association of Museums, MPMA Director Jo Farb Hernandez announced.

Accreditation certifies that a museum is being operated according to standards set forth by museum professionals, having its collections managed responsibly, and providing quality service to the public. Only 609 of the nearly 5,000 museums in the United States have been accredited, Hernandez noted.

The Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art was first accredited in 1978 and is one of only 228 museums to have reaffirmed accredited status. Accreditation status is reviewed every five to 10 years to ensure that a museum continues to meet professional standards.

"We hope the people of Monterey County and the central coast area of California share our pride in having earned this prestigious honor," Hernandez said upon learning of the review report. "The review of our accredited status was rigorous and demanding; self-study and an on-site evaluation by an experienced museum professional were required.

"We invite everyone in our community to help us celebrate this award by visiting the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art and exploring its fine programs and exhibits."

The museum, at 559 Pacific St. in Monterey, is open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays. Current exhibitions include Jananne Lassetter's "Arts Parts," which allows viewers to rearrange objects on canvas, and "William Morris: The Typography," which provides rare books and hand-drafted pages completed by Morris and his associates in the late 19th century. Admission to these and other continuing exhibitions is free.

A TURN-of-the-century nursery, decorated for the holidays, is depicted in the costume exhibit at Pacific House in Custom House Plaza, Monterey. The mannequins wear clothing made between 1895 and 1915. When the exhibit closes Jan. 7, the mannequins will be available for purchase.

Antique clothing exhibited at museum in Pacific House

TURN-OF-the-century children's clothing worn by soft-sculpture mannequins is displayed in a Christmas nursery of yesteryear through Jan. 7 in the Costume Gallery of historic Pacific House in Monterey.

In the vignette, Nanny has put away her ironing board and the activity is centered around trimming the nursery tree. Toys and tree trimmings are appropriate to the era of the holiday clothing displayed — 1895 to 1915. The little boy in the bathrobe finally took the bath in his tin tub at which he had been staring balefully during previous displays. He is now sporting his suit with the red linen pants buttoned to a white dimity shirt.

When the exhibition is over in early January, these children will be looking for a home. The mannequins are designed as collectibles, not playthings. Dressed in modern underwear, they are stuffed with polyester batting around a wire armature and are somewhat poseable.

Pacific House is in the Custom House Plaza of downtown Monterey. It is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

For more information about the exhibit, or to adopt one of the poseable mannequins, call 372-2608.

AUTHENTIC antique clothing, modeled by contemporary soft-sculpture mannequins, is featured at historic Pacific House in the Custom House Plaza, Monterey. The exhibit runs through Jan. 7.

CHRISTMAS DELIGHTS ALL AROUND

PEBBLE BEACH LOTS. Take one, take two. The largest lot of the pair has a delightful and unblemished view of the ocean, the trees, and the Monterey Peninsula Country Club fairways from its location as the very last building lot on Birdrock Road closest to the sea. Enjoy all the views and build a home to your very own specifications. Only two ocean view lots available now and this is the largest but least expensive—our Christmas gift to you—at only $500,000.

The smaller and non-view lot is also a very inexpensive stocking stuffer, so to speak. Located in Upper Pebble Beach and adjacent to the amenities of Peninsula life, is this quarter acre of building site. And ONLY $90,000 which is pretty hard to beat these days.

PEBBLE BEACH HOME. On Spyglass Golf Course — see 3 fairways. And the forest and the .55 acre of garden setting you will enjoy. 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths, dining room, open-beam ceiling living room, family room, swimming pool and spa,. glass-covered patio. Santa may move in and stay year round unless you beat him to it.

CARMEL HOMES. For any pocketbook and need:

1. $185,000. 1900 feet of home plus with 4 bedrooms, 2 baths, family room, adjacent to Mission Trails Park. Can't beat the size for the price.
2. $239,000. Two large bedrooms, one large bath, fireplace, laundry, carport, lovely garden setting. Walk to everything from this Dolores St. home.
3. $315,000. Santa could put his workshop and studios in this delightful OCEAN VIEW HOME. 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths, game room, music or art room with view, huge basement workshop, garage and, VIEWS, VIEWS, VIEWS.
4. $339,000. BARGAIN. BARGAIN. BARGAIN. Get the message. This is THE most for the LEAST in this quality and convenient location. 3 large bedrooms, 3 neat baths, dining room, laundry, garage, living room with fireplace, large sunny kitchen, deck, patio. Walk to everything.

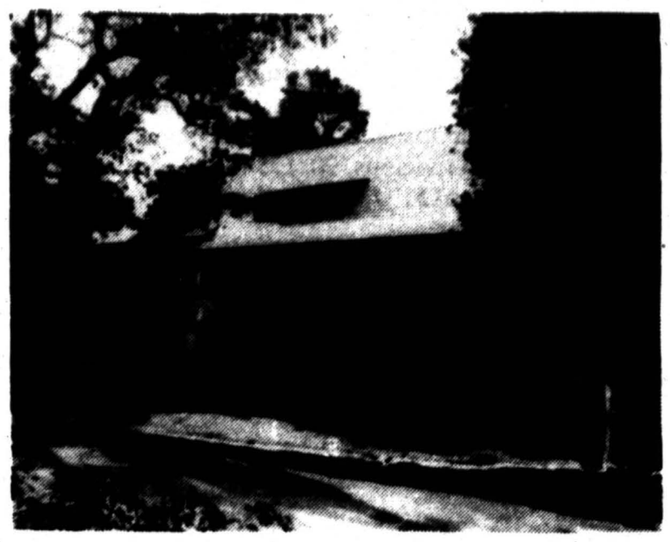
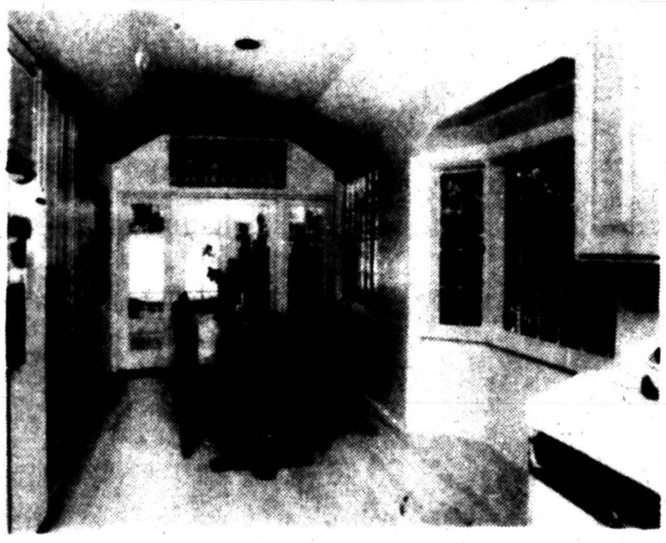
CHAPEL OAKS
HATTON FIELDS – CARMEL



An elegant older home on Hatton Road situated on an oak-studded half-acre, backed by greenbelt. The grounds are beautifully planted and sprinklered, criss-crossed by stone paths and a lily pool.

The key room is clearly the chapel-like living room, a 30x15 chamber whose far end shapes a semi-circle and whose ceiling rises in a series of horizontal courses of planks to a height of 26 feet. Great beams cross the upper reaches, and a giant chimney breast swells out from the west wall.



The kitchen is delightful. Just right off the entry hall, its working section (with all appliances in place) is compactly designed with new limed-oak cabinets on one side and a dormer window on the other, to a comfortable breakfast area. And beyond that is a very private deck with hot tub and lots of sun.

Everything's up to date at Chapel Oaks. It's today's home with yesterday's variety of charms. Over 3,000 sq. ft., with 4 bedrooms all of good size, and 3 baths, 2 upstairs and 1 downstairs. A definite showplace, with the dignity of maturity, convenience of complete updating, and the character of gracious family living.

A Muffin of a House

Nothing on the outside of this place prepares you for the enchanting variety of nooks and crannies inside. It stands well back along a typical Carmel street, about six blocks south of Ocean. A low wall leads along the curving drive and up to a demure little covered porch. The exterior is rustic, a broad dormer window projects from the right front corner, and one guesses that here is another of those quaint little Carmel cottages.

It has elements of that, but no way can you "type-cast" it. It's a glorious mixture of Carmel cottage, country house, Manhattan apartment and Gothic cathedral. And curiously, it all fits together.

The living room is hip-roofed with a complex structure of beams demanding your attention. The corner dormer is revealed as a pillowed window seat, an inviting nook. A fireplace dominates the south wall. At your left, running straight down the center of the house, is a long dining room, lighted by two giant skylights in its peaked roof, and ending at a beckoning door to a brick patio at the rear.

Five doors open from this cathedral-like chamber: living room at front, patio at rear, kitchen at left front, and bedrooms left and right. The left bedroom is the master suite, a sizeable boudoir plus a two-room bath that would be at home in New York. The first room has two great picture windows looking out to the private patio, a giant skylight and a magnificent Jacuzzi tub! The second room contains a vanity with triple mirrors, commode and many cabinets.

The other rear bedroom is smaller, with another dormer window seat, and would serve either as an intimate den or bedroom. Still another dormered bedroom and skylighted bath lie between this and the living room.

The kitchen might have been lifted intact from a European country home. It's done in Delft blue and cream, has double sinks, a flush range set in a projecting counter, conveniently placed washer, dryer and refrigerator, and a completely charming breakfast area facing the front. Another nook, probably one where every party will wind up.

Architecturally, this defies every attempt to give it a name. It's fascinating proof that the finest taste is a blending of flavors.
